THE LAST FAMILY—Sole family remaining in the "temporary" World War 11 housing at Marin City is that of Matthew Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have seven sons—too many for them to find a place to rent, according to Mrs. Hall, so they refused to quit their old duplex despite orders from the Marin County Housing Authority. The two sons with them here are Matthew Jr. (left) and Lorton. The dog is "Casey."

Anti-American Buddhist Mobs Flee Viet Troops' Bayonets

U.S. Gets Civilians To Safety

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAIGON — South Vietnamese paratroopers charged with fixed bayonets tonight and broke up a howling mob of thousands of Buddhists chanting "Yankee go home" and waving signs calling Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara "warmongers."

WILDEST YET

It was the most vociferous anti-American demonstration yet in Saigon, which has been torn by eight consecutive days of anti-government and anti-American demonstrations. This time a mob of 7,000 to 8,000 Buddhists were led by monks on bicycles, their yellow robes flapping behind them.

The Buddhists and their youthful threw up hasty barricades and hurled barrages of rocks and flaming torches at the battle-hardened troops. But the paratrooopers charged forward, their bayonets shining by the light of the torches.

The mob fled in panic. Not a Buddhist was nicked.

TROOPS AT HUE

A dispatch from the rebel city of Hue said the estimated 1,000 government forces were reported "ready" to reestablish order following yesterday's meeting between Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and dissident Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, former head of the First Corps.

It appeared the government troops might be preparing to use military force as they did

Castro Claims U.S. Plans To Invade

HAVANA (AP) — Prime minister Fidel Castro said Friday night he is convinced the United States is planning "armed aggression" against Cuba and ordered a state of alert for Cuba's 100,000-man armed forces.

In a communique read over radio and television, Castro accused Secretary of State Dean Rusk of "practically threatening us with war" over armed clashes between U.S. and Cuban forces along the perimeter of the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo in southeastern Cuba.

President Osvaldo Dorticos immediately called in the ambassadors of Communist countries and asked for volunteers "willing to aid Cuba against the threat of aggression by Yankee imperialism."

The ambassadors present included those of Communist China, the Soviet Union and North Viet Nam and the representative of the Viet Cong guerrillas in South Viet Nam. There was no report on the response to Dorticos' request.

Castro said the U.S. Defense Department lied in claiming that six Cuban soldiers penetrated the U.S. base Monday and exchanged fire with American guards.

Rusk told a news conference yesterday the United States had protested the incident and demanded that such actions stop. A Defense Department spokesman said as far as is known no one was injured in the exchange of gunfire.

Castro said the Pentagon version "does not contain the slightest element of truth" and likened it to lies which he said "always precede the aggression of Yankee imperialists."

"Maybe by such improbable and false declarations they are trying to create psychological conditions to unleash an aggression against our country," he said.

Cuba will never "abandon custody of our territory, which is virtually what Rusk is demanding," Castro said. Instead, "What we will do immediately is put our revolutionary armed forces and all the people of Cuba in a state of alert."

Marin Team Wins Again In Tourney

Catholic High Nips Napa, 2-1; Final Tonight

Marin Catholic's Wildcats charged into the finals of the third annual Redwood Baseball Tournament of Champions this morning by defeating the Napa Indians of the North Bay League, 2-1, in a thrill-soaked semi-final game before 900 fans at Albert Park, San Rafael.

The Marin Athletic League representatives, the Cinderella team in this field of 10 Northern California high school champions, will play for the title tonight, 8 o'clock, against the winner of this afternoon's other semi-final between Monterey and Lincoln of the Mount Hamilton League.

Southpaw Brian King pitched a three-hitter this morning, nearly duplicating the two-hitter thrown by teammate Ben Burch in Thursday's first round 2-1 Marin Catholic victory over Westmoor of Daly City. Burch, a senior righthander, will start on the mound tonight for Coach Gary Hughes' Wildcats.

King was given a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning. Shortstop Bob Lombardi was hit by a pitch to open the rally, Rick Denning beat out a bunt, Bob Nelson loaded the bags when his sacrifice attempt was thrown to third too late to nail Lombardi. Then Gerry Handlos singled infield to drive home Lombardi and Bob Bianchini's ground out to shortstop sent

What's A Family To Do, If There's No Place To Go?

By BRUCE COLEMAN

"Too many boys" is the main reason the Matthew Halls have been unable to find a new abode and move from the last occupied war housing duplex in Marin City.

"Most of the people said if we had had seven girls, it would be all right," said Mrs. Josephine Hall today. "They believe boys are harder on property than girls."

She said the Hall family started looking for a new home last December. They have searched unsuccessfully throughout Marin County and in Richmond.

"I looked for a house and found one in San Rafael. The man said he would rent it. Then he asked, 'How many children?' I said, 'seven.'

"He said, 'What are they?' I said, 'Boys.' He said, I can't rent to a family with seven boys.' I called other people on the phone and they, too, said that they couldn't rent to a family with seven boys.

"Last Saturday I got a letter from a real estate broker who said he had a two-story house in Mill Valley for $29,950. But we can't afford to buy.

"I have been looking for a place with Mrs. William Gealy throughout the county as far north as Novato. But there's nothing. I went to a real estate place in Richmond. All the houses are either for sale or too small, one or two bedrooms." (Mrs. Gealy works for the Marin Committee for Fair Play to help minority groups find housing.)

The Hall's sons range in age from 6 to 18 years.

Eviction papers were issued March 25 by the Marin County Housing Authority, after the Halls refused to leave, but action has been withheld until housing is found.

Wednesday night California Development Co. offered the Halls temporary rental of a $140 per month redevelopment apartment in Marin City. Arrangements have not yet been concluded.

"If they rent me one, sure, I'd rent it," said Mrs. Hall today. "This is like living out-of-doors.

"Last winter the whole house was flooded."

She said there are rats under the house. Windows have broken in the other unit in the duplex, vacated by the Henry Miller family in March.

Hall is a construction worker but has been out of work since February. He is a member of Hodcarriers and General Laborers Union Local 291, San Rafael.

The family is on welfare and Hall draws unemployment insurance. Mrs. Hall does domestic work, but not regularly.

Fire In Chair Kills Man, Dog In San Rafael

A San Rafael man died about noon today when the chair in which he was sitting caught fire.

The dead man was tentatively identified as Russell Bartell, in his late 50s, of 30 Surrey Lane. A pet terrier dog was also killed.

Asst. Marin County Coroner William C. Bradley said at the scene that Bartell apparently died of smoke inhalation. Firemen were unsure what started the blaze, which was confined mainly to the part of the apartment in which the chair was located.

His body was found by a neighbor, Jeffrey B. Cash of 98 Surrey Lane, who smelled smoke and went to see what was the matter.

Neighbors said Bartell's wife is in an East Bay hospital. He was said to be retired from the Air Force.

Bandit Flight Described By Teen-Ager

By ROBERT STREBEIGH

A school girl's wakening to the sounds of shots and shouts in the night, followed by the sight of fleeing men.

A trail of dollar bills and discarded miscellany, a young couple parked in a green sedan, watching a killing and a deputy sheriff's report written 17 days after the murder.

These were the highlights of testimony yesterday in the Superior Court trial of Mark C. Osuna, 30, and Jack R. Gorman, 36, charged with the Labor Day killing of bartender Mario Ferrari at the Mission Inn at 720 B Street, San Rafael.

Dorothea Rose Caldwell, a sophomore at San Rafael High School, told of hearing two shots shortly after 3 a.m. and going

Holiday Carnage Running Ahead Of 1965 Rate

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Millions of Americans flocked to the highways today in the first phase of a long Memorial Day holiday weekend.

The National Safety Council had predicted that between 460 and 540 persons would be killed in traffic accidents between 6 p.m., Friday, and 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

By 10 a.m. PDT, at the end of the first 19 hours of the 78-hour holiday period, the UPI had counted 83 traffic fatalities.

At the same time during the last Memorial Day holiday, the count was 77. The final 1965 toll was 490.

Thus, the 1966 traffic death rate was ahead of last year's rate and a Safety Council spokesman said the worst accident period was yet to come. Usually the final hours of the holiday period are the most dangerous on the highway.

Tam High Disturbance Sparks 'Campus' Rule

Tamalpais High School will have a closed campus following a "scrap" among 50 young people yesterday at C's Drive-In, about a block from the school.

"We will close the campus limits," said Principal Robert H. Prather yesterday, limiting students to the campus during school hours.

Students have beeen permitted to walk up Miller Avenue as far as C's at 510 Miller Avenue during mid-morning recess and the noon hour.

One student, a junior, received a bloody nose in the fight between Caucasians and Negroes a few minutes after 1 p.m.

Sheriff's deputies said the fight apparently followed an altercation between two students on Thursday and there had been leftover bad feelings.

Eight men in patrol cars from Mill Valley police department, the sheriff's department and the California Highway Patrol quelled the disturbance.

Prather said he believed the fight began with some of the "shirt-tail group, a College of Marin student and some dropouts."

He said he believes the situation would be better as far as controlling "drifters" and "outsiders" are concerned around the drive-in meeting place if C's were in Mill Valley jurisdiction.

The school and the drive-in are in sheriff's department jurisdiction since they are in the county. Annexation of the school to the city has been approved by the Local Agency Formation Commission but final action has been held up several months in litigation.

The fight lasted only about two minutes, said one sheriff's deputy.

Hospital's Wards Empty, Facility Quietly Slips Into Somber Sleep

By ALAN P. CUNNINGHAM

The beloved, venerable and decrepit lady called San Rafael General Hospital died at two minutes before 3 p.m. yesterday.

Her death was no surprise to anyone, although it came four days sooner than expected. But, as it always is when beloved old ladies die, those close to her were saddened and unbelieving.

The hospital's life, which started in 1905, came to an end when Mrs. Beulah Green of Marin City was sent home. After that, it was just a matter of tidying up and closing shop. The last shift of employees exchanged sad farewells as they punched out, one by one, at the timeclock next to the emergency room.

I walked around the halls of the empty hospital with the man who has been its administrator for two and a half years, Arthur G. Burns. He devoted himself efficiently to the administrative details of closing down a hospital, but a thousand little ironies kept popping up, and his emotions began to show.

"I've opened up hospitals a number of times," he said, "but this is the first time I ever closed one. It's entirely different."

Burns walked upstairs with Arthur R. Trueman, chief engineer at Marin General Hospital, so he could explain to him how to remove the big light in the operating room.

The light was part of $25,000 worth of equipment and furniture loaned to the hospital under a Babcock Foundation grant in 1959. It will now go to Marin General, while some other equipment will be handed back to the

Furore Over Veterans' Snub

CHICAGO (UPI) — A former GI accused of turning wounded Viet Nam war veterans away from the Conrad Hilton Hotel because they would "depress" other customers said yesterday he was misquoted.

Porter P. Parris, manager of the Chicago Hilton, made his statement—he refused to say it was an apology—after veterans' groups had threatened to boycott Hilton Hotels.

The Hilton's "Swingin' New Musical Ice Revue" in the Boulevard Room was to have been the high point of a night on the town for nearly 100 GIs recuperating from Viet Nam wounds at the Great Lakes Naval Hospital.

Ralph Shields, Fremont Township assessor, and Mundelein, Ill., Mayor Richard M. Foss said when they contacted Parris about reservations for the party he refused, saying the presence of the veterans, many wearing braces and casts and using crutches, would be "depressing" to customers who came to the room and wanted "things pleasant."

"I think the incident was uncalled for," Parris said, showing newsmen copies of a Certificate of Merit which was given the Boulevard Room by the Great Lakes Hospital for entertaining more than 1,000 patients in the last 10 years.

Police Lose Blaze Suspect

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—A man charged with setting a hotel fire which caused the death of a state senator and forced scores of other persons to flee for safety walked out of a hospital late yesterday without being served the warrant for his arrest.

The fire at the Roosevelt Hotel forced 118 persons, including 20 Michigan legislators, into the street. State Sen. William Romano, 55, collapsed on the sidewalk after awakening hotel residents and leading them through the smoke-filled halls.

The warrant against James McDaniels, 24, charged him with "carelessly and negligently setting fire to a hotel room." The charge is a violation of a state law and carries a 90-day jail sentence or a fine. Fire Chief Mark Keeney said McDaniels apparently fell asleep while smoking a cigarette.

Police said hospital authorities had instructions to notify them when McDaniels was ready to leave, after treatment.

But a doctor apparently signed his discharge papers, allowing him to go free before the police were notified. Police said they intend to find him and serve the warrant.

Wolden Jury Still At Work

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jurors continued deliberations today in San Francisco assessor Russell L. Wolden's bribery trial after they failed to reach verdicts in the first full day of consideration.

The juror s retired at 7:50 last night without any indications they were nearing a verdict.

The eight men and four women scrutinized the testimony collected during 60 days of court hearings on nine counts of bribery and one of conspiracy in San Francisco Superior Court. They asked that about 12 pages of testimony be reread.

They were concerned with the testimony of John P. Parsons, a former Mark Hopkins Hotel executive, who said he paid a $38,500 bank loan for Wolden. Parsons said he did it at the directions of Don Silverthorne, former president of the now-defunct San Francisco National Bank.

With the loan paid off, Wolden received $38,500 in shares in the co-operative apartment house where he lives. The prosecution contended this transaction was a bribe.

Three Survive Light Plane Crash

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — Three California survivors from the wreckage of a light plane crash that killed two women were resting in an Elko hospital today.

The three, including a 17-month-old girl, spent 24 hours in the Toana Mountains 20 miles west of Wendover on the Utah-Nevada border.

They had no water and only some candy bars, a banana and candied popcorn to eat, from Thursday afternoon to noon yesterday.

An Air Force helicopter rescued the pilot, Clifford Morris, 25, Redding; Chanda Batissa Morris, 17-months, Chico; and Virginia Theresa Jessop, 48, Central Valley.

Relatives said Mrs. Beatrice Morris, 28, Chico, Chanda's mother and Mrs. Daisy McCurdy, about 70, Mrs. Jessop's mother and the little girl's great-grandmother were also believed to be aboard and thought to be the two persons killed.

The women had been visiting relatives in Kansas and Morris was returning them to California.

COLLAPSES IN COURT—When Mill Valley resident Richard Rock, one suspect in the Dow Wilson painters union slaying case, was released on $25,000 bail yesterday during San Francisco court hearings, his pregnant wife, Cathy, fainted. Lending help are her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Black—wife of another suspect—and George Mattuch. (UPI Telephoto)

Richard Rock's Happy To Be Home, On Bail

Richard Rock, one of the five men charged with the murder of Painters Union leader Dow Wilson, sat down at his Mill Valley home today to his first home-cooked breakfast in two weeks.

"It was eggs, bacon and potato pancakes," said his blonde wife, Kathy. "We're celebrating a wonderful homecoming."

Rock, 33, was freed yesterday on $25,000 bail despite a telephoned threat Monday that he would die if released on bail.

"Everything here is normal," said Mrs. Rock at the couple's five-bedroom home at 250 Del Casa Drive.

"We are not treating the threat seriously. Naturally, we have police protection for the sake of the children but everything else is okay. Richard is just relaxing after his ordeal."

Rock was arrested May 11 near the Square Chair bar in San Francisco which he has owned since February.

He was charged with four other men with conspiring to arrange the murder of Wilson who was gunned down in a San Francisco street April 5. The actual trigger man is still being sought.

The Rocks have two boys and a girl, all of whom attend Park School. Mrs. Rock is expecting her fourth child. She fainted at Superior Court yesterday when Judge Norman Elkington ruled her husband could be released on bail.

The judge denied a defense motion that Rock's murder indictment be dismissed.

Bail was denied for another suspect in the murder, Clyde Simmonds, 75, of Sacramento. Bail motion for the other three, Norman Call, 46, of Carmichael, Sacramento County, Max Ward, 47, of Sacramento and Carl Black of Oakland will be heard Thursday.

Court Keeps Loyalty Oath On The Books

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Arizona Supreme Court has ruled the state's loyalty oath will remain in effect despite a ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that it is unconstitutional.

The decision was in a three-paragraph order signed by Chief Justice Fred C. Struckmeyer Jr. yesterday.

Referring to the April 18 decision on the U.S. Supreme Court, written by Justice William O. Douglas, Struckmeyer said, "It was difficult to understand exactly what he said."

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 in favor of Barbara Elfbrandt, 32, a Tucson school teacher, who with her husband, Vernon, had taught without pay since 1962 after refusing to sign the oath.

Struckmeyer's ruling said Mrs. Elfbrandt must take the oath before she can collect the back pay with interest.

The penalty clause in a 1961 law setting up the oath is declared unconstitutional, Struckmeyer said. The clause makes it a felony to take the oath and remain a member of an organization advocating forcible overthrow of the state government.

William Eubank, chief deputy attorney general, said the decision of the state court leaves the loyalty oath in effect, but without a penalty.

A state official noted that although the penalty clause has been stricken, school districts and state agencies may still dismiss an employee who refuses to take the oath.

HIGH-FLYING HITCH-HIKER—Maureen Bleker, due to graduate next week from art studies at Sullins College, Bristol, Va., will fly home to Austin, Tex., on June 10—in President Johnson's jet. Yesterday she received a telegram entitling her to the seat, which she decided to ask for because "they fly back and forth so much anyway." (UPI Telephoto)

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Luci Johnson and her fiance, Patrick Nugent, arrive in Milwaukee today for a strictly private pre-nuptial party at the Milwaukee Athletic Club.

British Strike Feared Far From Settlement

LONDON (UPI) —Hopes for an early end to Britain's crippling maritime strike faded today with a warning by the head of the striking seamen's union that the 12-day-old walkout might last six more weeks "unless someone is prepared to do something."

The warning was issued last night by Chairman William Hogarth of the striking National Union of Seamen (NUS) as hundreds of weekend vacationers en route to the Continent were caught up in the mounting confusion created by Britain's first seamen's strike in 55 years.

TO OUR PATRONS AND EMPLOYEES:

An Open Letter from WESTERN GREYHOUND LINES

We regret the inconvenience to our patrons and the loss to our employees resulting from the strike of our employees.

After months of negotiations, the Company made a substantial offer considerably in excess of the Presidential guidelines of 3.2% annually. The Union representatives did not pass the offer on to our employees or give them a chance to vote on the offer but, instead, handed the Company a list of 44 demands less than five hours before the strike deadline which either we were to accept or they would strike.

The Union turned down a request of the Federal Mediation Service to extend the strike deadline so negotiations could continue without a work stoppage. The Company in negotiations convened by the Federal Mediation Service in Washington, D.C., after the strike began, offered to arbitrate all unresolved issues. The Union rejected this request.

Western Greyhound Lines' employees already have the best labor contract of any bus company in the United States. In fact, Greyhound employees throughout the nation receive compensation which is from 20 to 40 per cent higher than the employees of other companies in our industry, many of whom belong to the same International Union. These same companies compete with Greyhound over some of the same highways and collect the very same fares. To our knowledge, no company in any industry operates under such a competitive disadvantage.

Greyhound's present pension plan is the most liberal and the most costly of any in the transportation industry, whether highway, rail or air.

Greyhound expects to lead the industry from every standpoint, but there is a limit beyond which we cannot and will not go if we are to protect our competitive position, our employees' future security, and our shareholders' investment.

Under the circumstances, we may be shut down for a long time. We ask for your patience and understanding.

Sincerely yours,

RALPH E. THOMAS, President

GAME

Denning home with what proved to be the winning run.

Napa, winner of its first two games, came back for its run in the sixth when the Marin Catholic defense collapsed for three errors and George White's sacrifice fly scored Bill Buckner.

The North Bay League's Indians almost tied it up in the seventh inning, but were shot down by a sensational double play.

Here's how it happened: With one out, Indian Clay Julian walked, then pitcher Doug Heskett singled sharply to center. Handlos rifled the ball back to the infield where shortstop Lombardi cut it off, firing to second baseman Joe Adams for the put-out on Heckett. Adams climbed out of a pileup on the play and relayed the ball to catcher John Komo who put the tag on Julian trying to score the tying run. Umpire Bill Abbey's "out" signal on the close play at the plate sent the partisan Marin Catholic crowd into a wild celebration.

Handlos led Marin hitters with two singles while Denning, Tony Quadros, Komo and King each had one. King struck out four and walked only one.

HOSPITAL

hospital's owner, John K. Taylor, along with the building.

Anything that is owned by the San Rafael General Hospital Foundation, however, will go into a warehouse, awaiting the day—a day which Burns strongly believes will come to pass—when a proud, new and well-equipped San Rafael General Hospital will open its doors.

"I understand we are gaining some good new nurses," said Trueman.

"I don't know where you will find them better," Burns replied.

We climbed the stairs to the third floor, where Burns pointed to an electrical box on the wall. Its installation was so new that plaster had never been restored where the wall had to be broken away to put it in.

The electrical box, called an "isolation transformer," and an emergency generator system had been installed to live up to the state Bureau of Hospital's standards. The job cost $4,200.

We walked into a room in which orthopedic devices were neatly labelled and hung in racks around the walls.

"The day I got here I walked in this room for something and things were lying around here so thick you could hardly move around. We got a fellow in who took pride in what he was doing and he made it look like this."

We sat down in his office, a cramped top-floor room with a sloping ceiling, and Burns said he would, after next week, be the only remaining paid employee of the foundation, staying on to run the drive for the new hospital.

First goal will be to find money to buy another 18 acres to go with the six acres near Terra Linda which was given the foundation three years ago.

Some people, he said, think the foundation should get an architect's drawing of a new hospital and go around trying to "sell it" to the community. Burns feels this would be dishonest, but once the site is purchased he intends to display lots of drawings.

These will, he hopes, show a building with no multi-bedrooms. The hospital in his mind's-eye would serve to prove that it costs no more—and maybe less—to take care of patients in single rooms.

Does San Rafael need a hospital, with the recent expansions of Marin General and Ross? Burns pointed to an American Hospital Assn. leaflet showing that nearly 66 per cent of hospital admissions are in "voluntary non-profit" hospitals run by church groups or foundations.

Marin General Hospital is run by a taxing district. Ross Hospital is privately owned.

"I feel that in San Rafael, people will continue to have a real need for the voluntary hospital system."

He displayed a new, fool-proof master key system which was installed with the idea it could be transferred to the new building.

Walking down to the second floor, Burns looked at the "Quiet" sign and lowered his voice before he remembered there was nobody around to be quiet for. He laughed a little about this.

The new hospital, he said, "is not impossible. It's got every-chance of success."

We walked past another sign on a room door that said "busy."

Burns bid farewell to three more employees as they went out, and noted that most would be able to find work at the county's hospitals. He said the building would be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today through Monday, and to 5 p.m. through Friday, so doctors could come in and finish their records. He confessed that disposition of the thousands of patient histories on file would be a big problem.

Then he pointed to the hospital's license, in a big case on the wall, and explained that it cannot, under new state law, be transferred along with the building back to Taylor, its former operator.

Because of this, many shortcomings, which have been tolerated by the state through a "grandaddy clause," will no longer be permitted. Cost of correcting them, even if Taylor chose to re-open the hospital, might be prohibitive.

"So the grand-daddy clause died at 2:58?" I asked.

"Yes, I guess you could say that," said Burns. Then he looked thoughtful and said. "You know, I think that is the section of the law that says licenses are no longer transferable, 258." 258."

We agreed that would be a little too ironic, but we looked it up, and he was right.

From 100 pounds of wheat about 72 pounds of flour is obtained, the remainder being used for millfeed.

DONNA L. RYAN

College Student Presidency To Donna Ryan

By a vote of nearly two to one, 19-year-old Donna L. Ryan of San Rafael yesterday became next fall's president of College of Marin associated students.

She is the fourth girl elected to the top post in the history of the college.

In runoff balloting, Miss Ryan received 529 votes, defeating Robert D. Glass of Sausalito, who collected 270.

A social science major, Miss Ryan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Ryan of 26 Bret Avenue.

For the past two semesters, she has been college center commissioner. She was former inter-club council secretary, secretary of the Atheneum Club and workshop chairman of the Area Seven Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Assn.

She plans eventually to enter Sonoma or Chico state college to study for a career as counselor with the state, city or county government.

In a runoff election yesterday for song leader groups, the Spinnakers, headed by Doris Deedy of Ross, received 433 votes, defeating the Would-You-Believe-Six, headed by Lynda Beardsley of San Rafael. They tallied 386.

A total of 47 per cent of eligible students voted in the elections this week—the highest number recorded at the college in recent years.

appointment other than in open session.

"We chose Stocking for the post in a closed session last Tuesday after interviews and it was left to Corona to contact him afterwards.

"I can't say for certain without speaking to the superintendent but perhaps he was under the impression the appointment was made. We can't do that at any but open meetings."

Stocking has been principal at Lodi for the past 12 years. He was formerly principal at high schools in Kansas and California.

A graduate of Kansas State Teachers College, he received a Master's Degree from Columbia University.

He is a member of the Rotary Club, the American Legion and is a Mason. He is married and has three children.

Stocking will succeed George A. Yertson at Terra Linda and Ellsberg will succeed Alfred N. Thomson at San Rafael. Each asked to step down from his high school job. Yertson will be principal of Santa Venetia School next fall, while Thomson will teach there.

to a rear window of her home at 1209 Second Street.

She said she saw two men, "running very fast," enter the parking area beneath her window and across B Street from the Inn. She described them both as tall, wearing gloves with "something dark on their heads". They disappeared up a walkway toward C Street, she said.

Officer David Vargo and Sgt. Thomas Stephenson, both of the San Rafael police, testified about searching the route two hours later.

They said they found an empty holster in the gutter, a dollar bill in the parking lot across B Street, another dollar and a hood cut from a sweatshirt sleeve on the walkway leading to C Street, and a .45 caliber bullet on the sidewalk near 714 C Street. All were submitted in evidence by District Attorney Bruce B. Bales.

Presence of the young couple in the green sedan was revealed by San Rafael Police Officer Martin J. Conlin, who was then a deputy sheriff.

Conlin said he pulled his patrol car into A Street behind the inn one minute after hearing of the killing at 3:10 a.m. He said he did so in time to see the sedan pull out of the A Street extension.

He stopped it at Second and Lindaro Streets. Inside, he said, were Linga Pino and Harold Percell, both of San Francisco.

(Percell and Gorman were charged in November with robbing a San Rafael liquor store last August. Percell pleaded guilty and received a suspended state prison term on condition he serve six months in the Marin County Jail. Gorman has not been tried on the charge.)

Under questioning, Conlin said, Percell told of witnessing the killing. He recalled hearing four shots and seeing a man "in all white clothes" fall to the ground. Another man ran away, he said, while two men in dark clothes ran the opposite direction.

The reference to "white clothes" contrasted with the blood-stained dark trousers and brown figured vest said to have been worn by Ferrari when gunned down. That clothing was introduced in evidence Thursday.

After questioning the couple, Conlin released them and went to his regular beat.

Public Defender Jerome C. Durham asked Conlin, "Why was this written report not made until Sept. 23?"

Conlin said he had made a "field report" on Sept. 6, and the later report was an expanded version. Under further cross-examination, Conlin said he had not mentioned Percell's eyewitness account of the killing in the field report, "just the fact they were behind the Mission Inn."

Meanwhile, the U.S. mission announced that the U.S. consulate in Hue was closed down today because of the poor security situation stemming from Buddhist-led disorders.

A spokesman said, however, the American Consul, Thomas Corcoran, is remaining in Hue and has set up an office in the Military Assistance Command compound.

All except a handful of Americans, including most of the consulate staff, were evacuated yesterday from Hue and flown to Saigon.

In Washington, the Pentagon has overruled one of its own generals, discounting his firsthand estimate of a possible 10,000 North Vietnamese regulars massing in Cambodia for raids into South Viet Nam.

With an assist from the State Department, defense officials flatly denied the assertion yesterday by Maj. Gen. Stanley R. (Swede) Larsen that up to six regiments might be in Cambodia.

The Pentagon correction of Larsen's estimate apparently reflected administration feelings that U.S. relations with neutral Cambodia were already difficult enough.

An estimated 1,500 U.S. Marines have launched a land and air assault against Viet Cong positions near the northern coastal city of Quang Ngai, the U.S. Command announced today.

A military spokesman said the Leathernecks met little resistance in their three-pronged assault 15 miles north of Quang Ngai and about 235 miles northeast of Saigon.

Also in Quang Ngai Province, not far from the Marine assault, American B-52 bombers struck today at two suspected Viet Cong troop concentration areas. The targets were 30 miles northwest of Quang Ngai city.

to qualify for low-rent housing because last year their earnings were $700 to high. "We tried to get a relocation apartment," Mrs. Hall said. "We had one bill that wasn't paid for. California Development Co. said they would have to get approval (for rental) through FHA and we couldn't get it because of the bill."

Mrs. Hall said that the county has agreed to pay about $100 of the rent. "If we can get back to work, we will be able to pay it ourselves," she added.

The Halls have lived in Marin City since 1957.

Donald O. Stutsman, executive director of the housing authority, said the duplex, built in 1942 for the Marinship shipyard, is one of four such wartime buildings left in Marin City. It was scheduled to be demolished in March.

Three are duplexes. One duplex has been set aside to be used by the Community Relations Service as a temporary recreation center. It is not being used, pending refurbishing.

There is also an old commercial building which houses a cleaner, barber shop, beauty shop, and an attorney's office.

Of the 817 families or single persons living in the "temporary" housing who have been relocated, 438 have remained in Marin City. Of these, 362 are living in low-rent public housing, 44 in relocation houses, 23 in apartments, Stutsman reported.

Nineteen live in Hilarita public housing at Tiburon, 30 in Mill Valley, 26 in San Rafael, 19 in Sausalito, 10 in Corte Madera, 10 in San Anselmo, and 9 in Novato.

Careful Shopper Is The Dollar Saver

NEW YORK (UPI) —The average woman shopper today spends at the rate of $19 an hour in the grocery market.

Is she getting her money's worth? It depends on whether she's a reader of labels, weights, grades and brands, and buys accordingly, says a publication called "Buyer, Be Wary!"

Granted, it takes a little more time to be a comparison shopper, but a woman "who lets her family's main resource—its income—dribble away through shopping habits that are manipulated on the one hand and careless on the other, helps defeat her own aspirations for her family," says the publication.

"IT IS NEVER ENOUGH," it adds "merely to glance at the front of the package and take for granted either the weight or the ingredients. With many products, the misuse of such terms as 'tall', 'giant', and 'extra-large' has become notorious."

"Buyer, Be Wary!" is the work of Sidney Margolius, an expert on consumer buying problems, and is published by the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit educational organization.

Margolius says some progress has been made toward clearer labeling and simplified if not standardized sizes of packages as a result of legislative and administrative agency efforts.

BUT IN AN AGE of "complicated goods and packaging" he offered some specifics in buying.

Margolius mentioned quality standards to look for, such as USP or NF vitamins indicating that the product meets specifications of the United States Pharmaceutical Assn. or National Formulary.

UL on electrical equipment, indicating it has been tested for fire or shock hazard by the underwriters laboratories;

The NEMA seal on air conditioners, refrigerators, water heaters or dehumidifiers indicating the product meets standards of the National Electrical Manufacturers Associations;

And the AGA seal on gas ranges indicating the model meets America Gas Assn. basic standards.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Celebrations And Travel Mark Spring Calendar For Marin—

By MOLLY MARIN

A birthday celebration and dinner will be given tomorrow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans in Kent Woodlands for his mother, Mrs. Charles J. Evans of San Francisco. Guests, all long-time friends of the honoree, will include Messrs. and Mesdames Max Kniesche, Edward Russ and Washington I. Kohnke and Mesdames Hugh McKevitt and Howard McKinley. Also attending will be Mrs. Evans' grandchildren, Vicki and Charles Evans.

ALTHOUGH they had many interesting experiences on their trip abroad, from which the William MacLanes have just returned to Mill Valley, they are glad to be home. Perhaps the most unusual part of their trip was being able to get into Cambodia, which very few people have succeeded in entering recently, and seeing the ancient cities of Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom. From Phenom Penh, the capitol of Cambodia, they flew over Viet Nam to Bangkok, a favorite place with them. They stayed in a hotel on the river with its famed floating markets and said they found the magnificent palaces and temples along the banks like a dream. They began the trip on March 24, taking the Oriana to Japan and visiting Yokohoma, Tokyo, Kyoto and Nikko. A highlight for them in Japan was staying in an inn in the Hakone National Park.

A SERIES of dinner parties were given last night to precede the talk of Felix Greene at Olney Hall at the College of Marin. The author-lecturer was honored at dinner by Mrs. Marion Frick of Sausalito, chairman of the Marin Committee for Public Discussion, which sponsored the event. The Bennet Skewes-Coxes were hosts at their home in Ross for the panelists who discussed the talk — William O. Weissich, Philip Drath and Robert Carrow. The Richard Wertheimers of Kentfield, Thomas Coxes of Mill Valley and Edward J. Neumeiers of San Anselmo also entertained.

THE CORINTHIAN ISLAND home of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Kraus was the setting for the 35th anniversary cocktail party for the Planned Parenthood Assn. of Marin this week, attended by officers and volunteers.

MRS. BRUCE HIXON and her five month old son, Tod, are visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stine in Houston. After a three week sojourn they will return to their home in Mill Valley.

HOSTING THE DISTRIBUTORS council spring conference at the Fairmont Hotel this week are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Price of Belvedere. A high point of the entertainment Tom and Jeanne have planned for delegates and their wives is dinner at the Windjammer restaurant in Tiburon tomorrow, preceded by a ferry boat tour of the bay. Jeanne Price brought the 50 women in the group to Marin today and they saw Muir Woods and had luncheon at the Alta Mira in Sausalito.

FLYING TO THE islands on June 4 for a three week vacation will be the Arnold Baptiste family of Loma Verde. French Designers Put Buttons On Left

By EUNICE FARMER

So many of you have written to me saying that you have been so nervous over making bound buttonholes that without thinking, you have placed them on the left front instead of the right front. You'll never guess what I discovered last week when I was searching through my French fashion magazines for new ideas.

There was a beautiful suit with the buttonholes on the left front. I'm sure they didn't make a mistake on the original, so it's my guess that a designer just wanted to be different, and he placed the buttonholes on the garment in an unconventional way.

If they can do it, so can we, so without any more apologies for having made a mistake, you must have the confidence to convince your friends that you did it on purpose.

Mrs. C. W. Papepey, Louisbury, Mo., wins a Tailor Trix pressing board for the following idea.

"With the newest styles coming out with so many contrasting colors for yokes, set-in-bands, and parts of a garment in different colors, it is often a problem trying to find just the right color zipper to use.

"If you need a two-tone zipper because of the colors, buy white for the white portion of your garment and dye the contrasting part of the zipper to match the contrasting color of your dress. A new felt-tipped pen works beautifully for this and can be found in almost every color."

You have given me so much confidence in my sewing that instead of being a nervous wreck when I worked on a new garment, I am more relaxed. Consequently, I make so many less mistakes.

I am making a summer dress with a yoke in a contrasting color. The yoke is set into the bodice in a V, and although there is a center front seam, I can't get the point of the yoke to fit. It looks rounded and no matter how much I clip, it just won't come out right. Help.

MRS. B.B.G.

You're so right about the importance of relaxing when sewing. I give my students the same lecture almost every week. A positive attitude can work wonders for you.

As to the yoke with the V to be set in, you must remember to stitch the center front seam only to a mark 5/8 inch from the edge of fabric. You do not machine stitch the entire seam closed. You must have this extra edge of fabric to work with. Be sure to back tack or secure the machine stitching where you have ended the seam.

First pin one side of the yoke so that the mark in the point of the yoke will match the point where you back stitched the seam. Stitch your seams up to this point and back stitch to secure. Remove from the machine and pin the other side of the yoke beginning at the point of the yoke and stitch to the end of the seam.

Remember you never cross over a seam when stitching, but remove the fabric and begin stitching again on the other side of your seam. This is one of the details that are described in detail in my leaflet "All About Gussets." You might not think about this in relation to a gusset, but the construction detail is very similar and if you can do the gusset detail perfectly, you will be able to construct many such details to perfection.

If you would like this informative leaflet, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope plus 10 cents to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal and your copy will be sent to you promptly.

Recent surveys show that 84 per cent of the teen-agers today are doing part of their own sewing. This seems like a fantastic proportion of teen-agers. We are curious as to why so many more are sewing today. About a year ago I asked the women to write and tell me why they enjoyed sewing. The answers were a real inspiration.

Now, won't you sit down today and tell me why you enjoy sewing and what you would like in patterns and fabrics, to make you want to sew even more? Just send me a card or a note, but please let me hear from you.

Highway 101 Intensive Patrol Set

The California Highway Patrol will double its patrols on Highway 101 in Marin County Wednesday as part of on intensive statewide safety campaign.

Lt. William H. Porter, executive officer, said 50 officers would be on Highway 101 in Marin County Wednesday as part of an intensive statewide safety campaign.

Lt. William H. Porter, executive officer, said 50 officers would be on Highway 101 patrol duty from the Corte Madera office, which is now up to 63 men.

Porter said Wednesday is the official opening of a campaign on Highway 101 from the Sonoma County line to Gilroy, excluding San Francisco. Most of the men are on partial duty now as part of their training, he said.

The safety campaign is slated to last 14 months, Porter said. It is based on a 1964 Oceanside study that showed that fatalities decline under intensive patrolling.

Dead Officer's Estate In Probate

Appointment of an administrator for the estate of Theodore A. Lusher Jr., San Francisco police inspector and Novato resident killed in a traffic accident, is asked in a petition filed in Marin Superior Court.

Also killed was Lusher's wife, Claire, 32.

Hearing on the petition by a daughter, Jeanette Carol Dodds, 22, is scheduled for 10 a.m. June 6. It also asks for temporary support of $300 monthly for the three surviving minor children, Lora Lynn Lusher, 15, Craig Andrew Lusher, 14, and Ted Lusher, aged 5.

The petition estimates Lusher's estate at "over $2,000." Lusher and his wife were fatally injured in collision of their unmarked police car with a Greyhound bus May 7 in San Francisco.

Dixie, San Rafael Trustees Split Down Middle Over Unification

By ROBERT M. COPPOCK

The issue of unification of the San Rafael and Dixie school districts has split the two school boards right down the middle.

In a poll of board members, the Independent-Journal found two members of the Dixie School District board in favor of unification and three opposed. On the San Rafael Board of Education, two were in favor, two opposed, and one, Walter R. Castro Jr., refused to tell where he stood.

Several of the board members said they reached their decisions reluctantly, admitting to arguments on both sides of the question to be decided by voters in the June 7 election. The unification would create a single school district in the area of the San Rafael High School District.

One Dixie trustee who had been opposing unification, Dr. John A. Starkweather, has switched.

"I believe that separate operation has been of benefit to the Dixie District but that further delay has lost its advantage," he said. "It is my hope that the Dixie philosophy is now strong enough to influence a combined district."

The only other Dixie trustee in favor is Thomas N. McNamara, who has long been on record in favor. He said he believed unification is inevitable anyway, and should be supported now in order to gain extra state aid for the schools.

Most enthusiastically in favor on the San Rafael board is Carl J. Brown, a teacher in Tamalpais Union High School District.

"I don't believe schools will cost less, but we can provide more services and equipment with unification," he said, adding that there would also be better coordination between curricula of the elementary schools and the high school in the Dixie area.

It was the question of coordination that tipped the scales in favor of unification for San Rafael Board Member Herman L. Childress.

"I'm reluctantly in favor," he said. "If it passes, it will increase the taxes in our area, but if it fails, our taxes will still have to go up, thanks to the state law. The state's going to force the issue eventually anyway."

Dixie Trustee Earl H. Koehler is one of the most strongly opposed to unification. He said unification should wait until communities strongly want a new district which will be better than the present ones.

Koehler added he felt there would be no disadvantage to either district if the measure were defeated.

Melvin R. Stidham of the same district, also opposed, said he was worried that the present Dixie educational program would be jeopardized by something unknown.

"I also disagree with those who say unification is inevitable," he said.

Finally, in Dixie, Mrs. Dorothy Brown said the entire issue needs much more study. She said the voters have not been informed enough about the complicated economic factors involved.

She said she doubted the new tax limit would allow the unified district to raise enough money to maintain the present Dixie program, and said state aid would probably be lost for school construction, requiring an early bond election.

Lawrence I. Kramer, once a member of the Dixie board but now on the San Rafael board (thanks to the fact the high school district covers both areas), said he is opposed but not completely decided.

"I'll probably not vote for unification this go-round," he said, but added that he felt unification would eventually come, simply because of the state requirement that the issue go before the voters repeatedly until it passes.

The other San Rafael member Mrs. Anita C. Strom, said she was opposed, but declined to give her reasons. She said voters should be allowed to make up their own minds "without the board members telling them how to vote."

Castro took a similar stand on giving reasons, and then also refused to say where he stood.

PROBLEMS OF LEISURE

Politics, Group Activity Helpful In Preventing Retirement Decay

Last of Three

By HARRY FERGUSON

UPI National Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) —First he stops shaving regularly and begins to skip haircuts. Food spots stain his clothing and he doesn't clean them off. He spends hours in front of a television set. He doesn't go calling on his neighbors and they don't come to see him.

That is the portrait experts draw of a man who was retired against his will at age 65 and has given up on himself and on life. There are more of them in the United States than you realize, because far too often the so-called golden years turn out to be brass.

There are 18 million persons in this country past 65 years. They are a challenge to sociologists who are working hard against the clock to find answers to a tragic problem before the rising tide of old people overwhelms them. The projection for 1980 is 24.5 million persons past 65; for 2000 it is 32.5 million. The tragedy of unhappy old people is that their dissatisfaction with life can drive them down the dark path to mental maladies.

"Sleeplessness, the inability to relax and fear of leisure are among the earliest and most common symptoms of so-called psychiatric illness," writes Dr. Alexander Reid Martin. "The symptoms are, of course, unrelated to pain and any demonstrable disease.

"When these patients are confronted with leisure, they are restless, dissatisfied, irritable and they show great intolerance inactivity and waiting. They have great feelings of guilt if they read a book, go to the movies, watch television or do anything for sheer pleasure. They are especially intolerant of children."

The problem is to find something that the old person can get interested in, for, as Dr. Wilder Penfield puts it "rest, with nothing else, results in rust."

"Too often the so-called well earned rest of an elderly man consists of mowing the lawn and carrying out the garbage for his wife. When he is well behaved, she lets him wash the dishes."

Most of us have a vague idea that old people will spend lots of time reading books that they have meant to get around to all their lives. Not so. People who have not acquired the reading habit early in life cannot suddenly be converted into bookworms on their 65th birthday. Millions of books are sold in the United States each year, but they are read by a small minority of the population. Dr. George Gallup came up with some dismaying information when he tested the reading habits of Americans:

"We asked them to identify a number of famous personages of history. Pasteur was a pharmacist. Gainsborough was variously described as a soldier, a pilot and a doctor. Emerson was an inventor especially of light bulbs and radios. Rasputin was a character in a novel written by Shakespeare. Sibelius was a politician and Strindberg was a scientist. Schopenhauer was a member of Congress. The population of Russia was variously estimated at 4 million on up to 600 million with only one college graduate in four being able to give a figure within 50 million of the correct one."

If not reading, then how about television and radio? Television is the most popular pastime of the aged, chiefly because it is so readily available and requires no physical exertion.

But it is narcotic in its effect —once old people come to rely on it they drift into a pattern of doing nothing but watch television in their waking hours. One survey showed that only two out of seven oldsters really enjoyed what they were seeing on the screen. They simply were using television as a time killer.

There is a saying that a hobby ceases to be fun once it stops being a hobby and becomes a major factor in your life. Two weeks of fishing a year is fun, golf one day a week is diverting, but one baseball game begins to look pretty much like another if a man goes five days a week. But some old people do keep themselves busy and contented with hobby-like enterprises and their preference is in this order:

Collecting things (stamps, coins etc), traveling (very big and the cause of the mushrooming of trailer camps), card playing (especially when bridge and pinochle clubs are formed), gardening, bowling, sewing, hunting and fishing, photography (making a rapid rise as fool-proof cameras are perfected), boating and handicraft work.

The experts don't agree on the details of how old people can keep happy but they do have one basic recommendation —oldsters should affiliate with a group of some kind that meets regularly and has goals that are constructive. Church activity is good provided the old people can participate and not just listen to sermons. Best of all, the experts say, is political activity because the old person knows he is influencing not only his own way of life but the future of the nation as well.

Wild Horse Valley offers:

- a homesite in a parklike setting—
- a clubhouse for the exclusive use of Wild Horse Valley residents, their guests and club members—
- swimming and wading pools—
- one hundred thirty eight magnificent acres filled with riding and walking trails, wild life and botanical treasures, all for the exclusive use of Wild Horse Valley residents, their guests and club members—
- financing plans to make it possible for 97 families to live in a manner they could only have dreamed of before—
- assurance by deed restriction that this last frontier will forever be held in its present state—as a private park—for the exclusive use of residents and club members.

With land costs rising to astronomical figures—with land development costs reaching impossible highs, it seems very likely that Wild Horse Valley will be not only the first, but the last such development possible in Marin County.

Water Lack Closes Down Coast School

The owner of the Point Reyes Water Co. has promised to install standby pumps to prevent future pressure drops like one which resulted in classes at West Marin School being let out an hour early Wednesday.

Supt. Howard F. Brose of West Marin School District, who has long complained about the water company's service to the school, angrily dismissed classes at 2:15 p.m. because pressure was so low that toilets would not flush.

Brose said the pressure fell at noon and he called James Downey, owner of the water company, who lives in Penngrove, Sonoma County. Downey promised to send help within two hours. Brose grew angry when that much time passed and nothing was done.

The repairman arrived a short time after pupils went home. Pressure was restored and school resumed Thursday.

Brose said he would continue, to plead with various public agencies to put pressure on Downey so he would improve service. One of those who did so quickly was County Sanitation Director William L. Desmond.

Desmond said Downey's safety record is excellent but the health department has long been after him to do away with the frequent interruptions in water service.

Wednesday's failure, Desmond said, was attributed to an electrically driven pump having "thrown a belt." Downey, he said, promised Thursday that he will install emergency pumps to take over if one fails.

Other citizens, meanwhile, said they would like to see the area annexed to the Marin Municipal Water District. Leader of this drive is Dr. Leslie R. Weber.

Restaurant owner Jack Mason said there is plenty of water, and the problems have been due to faulty equipment or rusty pipes. He predicted the drive to annex to MMWD would have the support of a majority of citizens.

Entries for the fun match close Monday, entry blanks are available through pet shops, veterinarians or Sir Francis Drake club members.

Crank Telephone Calls Increase; Here Are Steps To Combat Them

By PAT PERRY

There's been such an increase in the volume of obscene and threatening telephone calls in California that Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. is stepping up its program to cope with them.

There are no statistics on such calls for Marin County, according to J. D. LaNoue, San Rafael district manager, but a recent report from New York indicated a 30 per cent increase last year. "I would estimate that this is at least equalled here, maybe even more," he said.

The calls range all the way from outright obscenities to children playing tricks. But they have one thing in common: the person receiving the call doesn't want it.

It's a matter of fact that men seldom are bothered with obscene, threatening, or annoying calls. Yet there can be few women who have never received at least one of them.

What can you do to prevent this hazard? And if you should have the misfortune to be pestered by an anonymous caller, what do you do?

For a start, always use the telephone on your own terms. It's your telephone. Don't volunteer your name or number to a caller, simply answer "hello." When someone calls and asks: "What number is this?" don't answer. Instead ask the caller what number he is dialing, and with whom he wants to speak. And if he does give your name and number, ask him to introduce himself.

"Many people have acquired steady telephone nuisances by giving their number or identifying themselves after the caller has reached them by mistake," said LaNoue.

How have you taught your children to answer the telephone? Do they say "Smith residence?" Do they answer with the number? Both are outdated and downright dangerous, according to LaNoue.

Perhaps it offends the rules of etiquette, but he recommends having your children — and baby sitters — answer with a simple "hello." Nothing else.

"Instruct your children and baby sitters not to give any information to anyone," he said. "Have them obtain the caller's name and number and say that you will call back. Nothing more."

If your telephone should ring and the caller remains silent after you have said "hello" twice, hang up immediately. By repeating "hello" you may be encouraging those terrifying silent callers.

And if you're unlucky enough to hear a caller make an indecent or suggestive remark, hang up fast. Don't say a word. The kooks who get their kicks this way lose interest if no one will listen.

Victims of annoyance calls should call the telephone company's business office and discuss the problem with a trained customer representative, said LaNoue. All Marin business office personnel and operators of the telephone company are getting special training in assisting customers in dealing with such calls, he said.

Since the vast majority of these calls are received by women, LaNoue said a woman living alone should never list her name in the telephone directory in a way that makes it evident she's alone.

"Don't put Miss Mary Smith, list yourself as M. Smith," he suggested. "A widow or divorced women should change her listing from Mrs. M. Smith to M. Smith too. Frequently these cranks go through the directory looking for this type of listing."

Housing Expert Says
PETALUMA GARDENS
is "Greatest" value

Dear Home Buyer:
Just as Virginia Russell was closing up the other day, a couple returned who had previously spent 3 hours earlier in the day closely inspecting our homes.

The man said, offhandedly and completely casual, "We'll take Model #1700 on Lot 63." Our new resident is a housing expert whose specialty is appraising property.

Not only that, but we have the happiest group of homeowners you've ever seen. They act like they all belong to the same club.

Which they do! Petaluma Gardens Homes Association. (Our pool will be ready this summer.)

Join our club. Buy a home here. Save money. Be happy.

Cordially,
Sidney Garfield
Developer

★ No tight money problem here!
★ No overhead wires (all utilities underground)

China Tourist Backs Drath In Debate On U.S. Actions

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Unless the United States "can find a means again of identification with the ordinary people of the world," she will eventually fall victim to the "rise of the hungry people."

So declared Felix Greene, British-born California resident who has four times visited Communist China and has entree to her government leaders, in a discussion of "China and United States Foreign Policy" that drew an overflow crowd last night to Olney Hall of College of Marin.

Besides Greene, the discussion presented Robert D. Carrow, chairman of the Marin Democratic Central Committee; William O. Weissich, conservative Republican leader who was Marin campaign chairman for Barry Goldwater, and Phillip Drath, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

Greene found himself in such agreement with Drath that several times he said he could add nothing to Drath's statements.

He found himself at most complete odds with Weissich, who held that China, not the U.S., is the aggressor power; that the U.S. must keep fighting in Viet Nam, and declared: "I think what we are doing is to protect what we have. I, for one, am willing to do anything to protect what we have."

Greene, the first speaker, said the United States has "developed a fantastic network of power" since World War II. He quoted U.S. News and World Report figures of 3,328 U.S. foreign military bases, and a Navy larger than the combined navies of all the rest of the world put together.

"We have none of the normal attitudes inside ourselves of a militaristic power," said Greene, but this immense concentration of arms has caused other nations — "even our friends"—to regard us as one.

This power has been created, he contended, to back up U.S. economic dominance which finds six and one-half per cent of the world's people controlling two-thirds of its commerce.

This is "what we have," as Greene described it — though Weissich in speaking of defense of what we have referred rather to our democracy and liberty.

The "hundreds of millions of hungry people" in the world are not satisfied with such dominance by one nation, contended Greene. And the Chinese, who "realize they haven't the faintest chance of ever meeting us on an equal footing militarily or commercially," regard our attitude toward these hungry millions as our "Achilles' heel."

Yet the U.S., he said, continues to support dictatorships against the uprising of the hungry masses, using a "rhetoric of justification which revolves around the defense of freedom and democracy." It has done so in Viet Nam, he charged.

Drath noted that the Chinese leaders "are pursuing the traditional game of power politics—as we are." But power politics, he contended, "will mean the end of our civiliization . . . It makes no difference whether we die with communist slogans on our lips or capitalist slogans. We're just as dead."

Greene said he agreed completely.

Carrow took the position that the U.S. has shown great restraint with its power—"since World War II, not a single foot of foreign soil has been acquired by this country." Chinese intransigence and Chinese armed intervention in Korea have been responsible for the impasse between the two nations, he said.

Declared Weissich: "China is not a menace unless you fear communism."

The dilemma that nothing but war can result if neither side will make the first move toward rapprochement was posed by Drath, who called for recognition of the National Liberation Front as the enemy in Viet Nam, and an immediate ceasefire, as the first move.

Greene, in his closing remark, declared:

"We must learn that, even with those we detest, we have much more in common as human beings than we have things that separate us as political and national entities."

Greene and Weissich found themselves in agreement on one thing: That there are few places in the world where such a debate could be staged while a country is at war, and that this is a freedom worth keeping and appreciating.

Bennett Skewes-Coxe was moderator of the debate, which was sponsored by the Marin Committee for Public Discussion, with Marian Frick as coordinator.

The large crowd was predominantly pro-Greene and pro-Drath.

Coroner Candidates In Spotlight At Session

The four candidates for coroner generated most of the heat at a candidates night last night at the Terra Linda Recreation Center, frequently forcing chairman Jack Bradley of the Terra Linda Park and Recreation District to rap them to order.

Speaking last night at the meeting, sponsored by the Terra Linda Recreation and Park District, were district attorney candidates A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr. and incumbent Bruce B. Bales, coroner candidates William C. Bradley, Donovan O. Cooke, Gilbert F. Freitas and Richard Frederick Wood, first district supervisor candidates John F. McInnis, William F. Upton and Melvin S. Warenback, and Supervisor Peter H. Behr, speaking for the $4.3 million park bond issue.

Coroner candidate Wood charged that records of the coroner's office have not been available to the public and were not even seen by the county grand jury when it investigated the office. When he started to charge that Bradley is using the courthouse and its staff to run his campaign, Jack Bradley pounded the gavel until Wood stopped talking.

"Everything we do in the coroner's office is a public record," candidate Bradley said. He insisted grand juries who investigated the office had found nothing wrong.

Cooke, a physician, and Freitas, a San Rafael police officer, based their arguments on the medical vs. the investigative functions of the coroner's office. Cooke argued mainly that the coroner must be a physician to determine cause of death, and said that pathologists have been carrying much of the coroner's load up to now.

Freitas argued that the coroner should be a trained investigator to learn the cause of death where a criminal act is a possibility, and also that the coroner is a "peace officer," so he should have a background in police work.

Freitas repeated his contention, made several times before, that the county needs a morgue at Marin General Hospital to eliminate "political overtones" in the present system of allocating autopsies to mortuaries.

District attorney candidate Bjorklund, as he has before in the campaign, cited crime statistics and said people in Marin are greatly concerned about the rate of crime in the county, and referred to the unsolved murder of a Terra Linda woman. "We've heard nothing about this for months," he said.

Bales retorted that the county has one of the lowest crime rates in the state, and that it is not the duty of the district attorney's office to solve crimes but to prosecute them.

"He's not telling the truth," Bjorklund began, but moderator Bradley would not let him continue.

Supervisor candidate Warenback, a director of the Terra Linda Park and Recreation District for six years, stressed his ability to give local representation to the Terra Linda area. Taking a swipe at McInnis, former mayor of San Rafael, he said, "You can have responsible county government or you can vote for the 'cronyism' that ruined San Rafael."

McInnis reviewed his accomplishments as mayor, stressing that the improvements made in San Rafael during his office were paid in cash, that the tax rate was lowered, and that the bonded indebtedness of the city was retired.

Upton, a member of the Marin County Planning Commission for 13 years, said he is "the only candidate with experience at the county level," and stressed the need for sound planning. Then he, too, took some swipes at McInnis, citing some conditions he considered bad in San Rafael.

Habit On Long Suit Sometimes Can Cost Slam If High Cards Used

It is usually correct to set up a long suit by taking your high cards first and making plays with the low cards later.

If you follow this habit when there is no need to do so, you may live to regret it.

Opening lead — ♡ Q

South won the first trick with the ace of hearts and tried to ruff a heart with dummy's deuce of spades.

East over-ruffed and returned a trump, and South eventually had to give up another heart trick.

NOT CIVILIZED

"Very bad luck," South complained, and everybody agreed that in a civilized community the hearts would break no worse than 4-2.

They also agreed that South could make the contract by drawing two rounds of trumps and then leading high hearts to make West cover.

South would thus ruff out the nine and 10 of hearts and could eventually give up a trick to the jack. South's five would draw West's four, and declarer's last two hearts would then be good.

SIMPLER PLAN

It was all very complicated, but it depended on a 2-2 break in trumps. A much simpler plan would make the slam if South didn't insist on winning the first trick with the ace of hearts.

South should ruff the first heart in dummy with the deuce of spades and lead a trump to his hand.

RUFF HEARTS

He can then ruff low hearts with the 10 and queen of spades, after which he can get back to his hand to draw trumps.

Only now is it right for South to take a trick with the ace of hearts. This leaves West with only one heart. South gives up one heart trick and claims the rest with trumps and good hearts.

Physical Fitness Break For Workers

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — The Board of Public Works here gives its workers a 10-minute physical fitness break each working day.

Controller Louis L. Goldstein said coffee and soft drink breaks put on fat. "It's time we have something to take it off," he added. The workers are supposed to spend the 10 minutes doing exercises to trim waistlines and tone muscles.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 28, the 148th day of 1966 with 217 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase; the morning stars are Venus and Saturn; the evening star is Jupiter.

British Prime Minister and statesman William Pitt was born on this day in 1759.

On this day in history:

In 1864, Archduke Maximilian landed at Vera Cruz to assume the throne of emperor of Mexico. He was the brother of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria-Hungary.

In 1905, the Russian fleet was defeated by the Japanese navy, sealing Russia's ultimate loss in the Russo-Japanese war.

In 1934, the Dionne quintuplets were born near Callender, Ontario.

In 1940, the evacuation of British and French forces from Dunkirk started.

A Thought for the Day — President Thomas Jefferson said: "The republic is the only form of government which is not eternally at open or secret war with the rights of mankind."

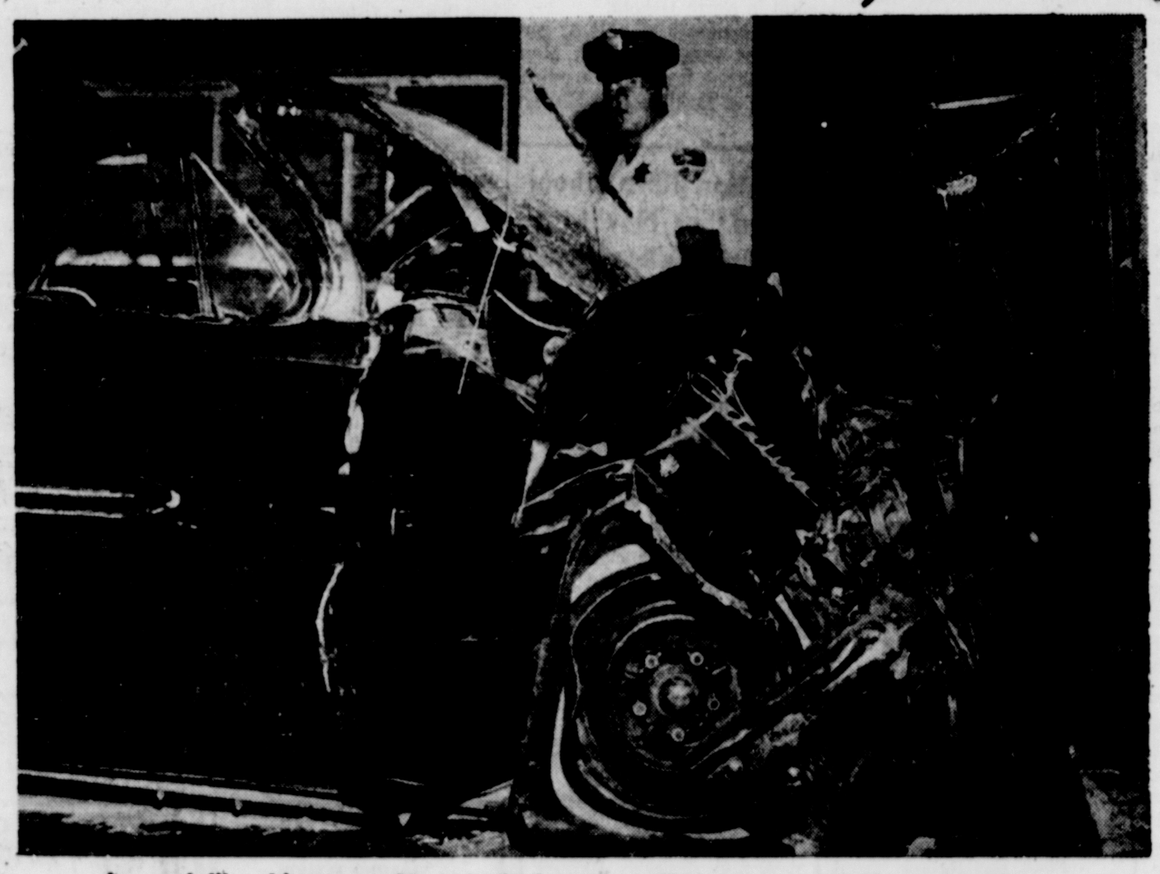
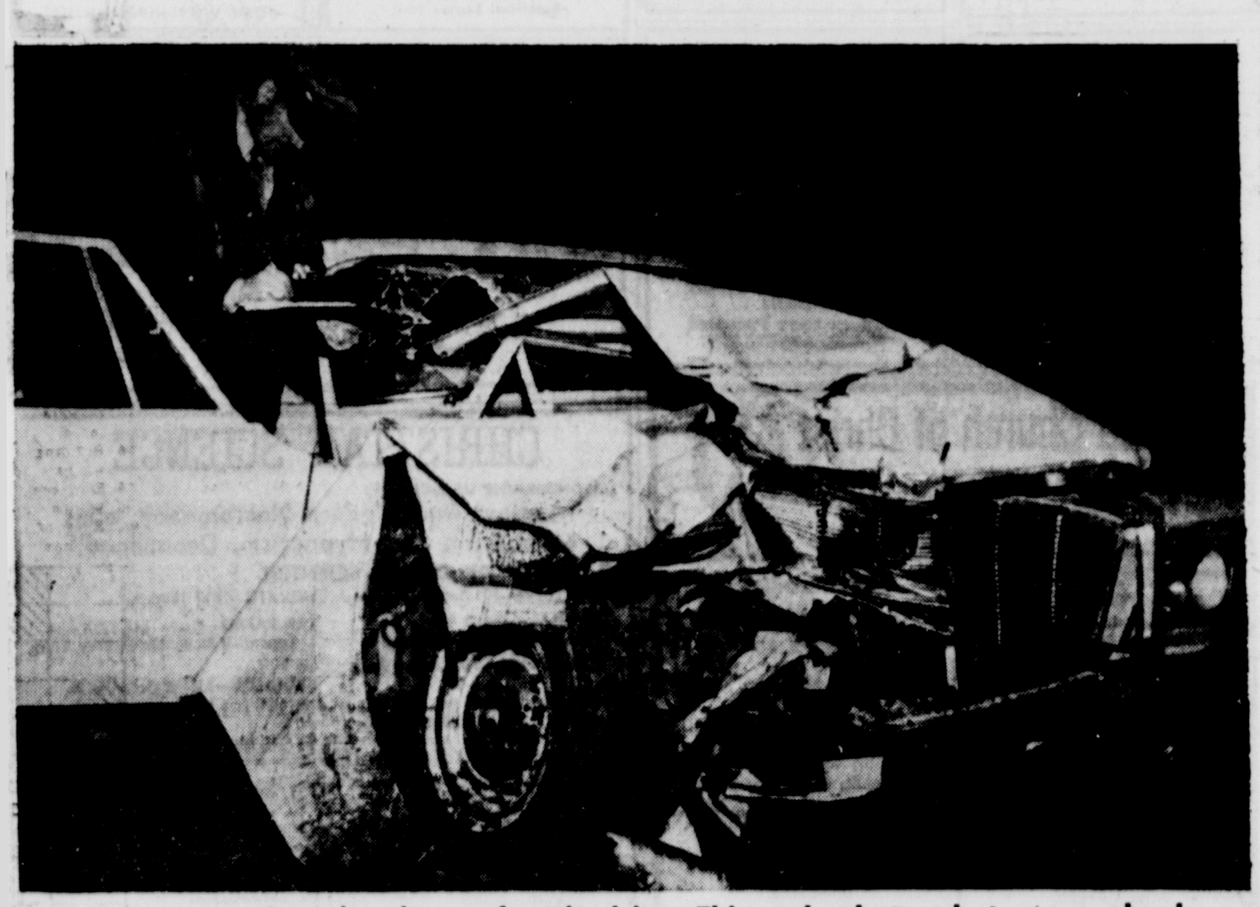
Don't be a memory, be alive!

Let's blow the whistle on accidents this Memorial Day Weekend

Don't get carried away by your car—drive it with care and consideration. Remember, a car is powerless until you put on the power. Its speed is YOUR speed and its control is in YOUR hands. Which means that you can control and eliminate accidents by safe and sane driving. To further help you on the highway, the California Highway Patrol will be out in force this weekend. They'll police the road; you police your car. A great combination for a safer, happier holiday!



A wreck like this occurs in seconds, but the effect can wreck lives, families and homes forever. If you think you're a good driver, prove it!



A car is only as safe as its driver. This weekend, stay alert; use your head, not the throttle; and give the other fellow the courtesy you expect him to give you.

BIBLE SOCIETY HONOR—Rev. Sig G. Sandrock (left) of Tiburon receives a plaque from Dr. Dean S. Collins, executime secretary of the Pacific and Western regions of the American Bible Society, honoring Sandrock's work at the Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church and San Quentin.

Bible Society Honors Pastor From Tiburon

Rev. Sig G. Sandrock of Tiburon has been selected from among 330 Lutheran pastors in California, Hawaii, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and New Mexico for special honors by the American Bible Society, now celebrating its 150th anniversary.

He recently received a plaque from the society during a convention of the South Pacific district of the American Lutheran Church, held in Los Angeles.

The honor came in recognition of three programs Sandrock has been in charge of two, at his church, the Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church, Tiburon, and the other at San Quentin Prison.

At the prison he has headed a Bible study program for the inmates' School of Religion.

At the church he initiated a Bethel Bible Series program and, during Lent, dramatized the season by depicting characters found in the vicinity of the cross, dressing in appropriate costumes and preaching sermons to fit the character portrayed.

Sandrock has served at the Tiburon church its founding in 1961, coming to Marin County from Wisconsin.

Nuns Will Close Orphanage After Century Of Service

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Three Catholic nuns left the civilized state of Ohio and headed west 100 years ago to establish an orphanage and hospital at Santa Fe.

The orphanage they founded, the oldest in the West, will close its doors next month.

Over the years, thousands of young girls of all races and creeds were helped at St. Vincent's Home for Girls in Santa Fe. For a century it was operated by the Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Emotionally, it is very difficult to close the home," Sister James Marie, the present supervisor, said. "But intellectually, it is the only thing to do."

The driving force behind the home in its beginning was Archbishop Jean Baptiste Lamy. In August, 1865, he wrote a letter to the Sisters of Charity in Cincinnati requesting aid in establishing an orphanage and hospital in Santa Fe. The letter brought the three nuns by stagecoach over the 2,000-mile journey to the frontier territory of New Mexico.

Because of the distance from the mother house in Cincinnati, St. Vincent's in Santa Fe was considered a "China" mission by the Sisters of Charity.

Their first building was made of adobe mud, and it leaked in wet weather. Later the home was moved to a larger building near the hospital and was home to orphans and sisters for 90 years. That building was condemned 10 years ago, and the orphanage was moved to a converted residence.

An early benefactor of the home was Gen. James H. Carleton, who brought in the first orphan —an Indian girl he found on a battlefield. The girl later was named Mary Carleton. The general also helped by sending wood, meat and flour to the orphanage.

Initial financing for the home and hospital came from a $3,000 grant from a Rev. Stephen Avel. In the early years the sisters made do with whatever they could get and later the New Mexico Territorial Legislature authorized the territory to pay $10,000 per year to St. Vincent's as "The New Mexico Orphanage."

Today the home also receives funds from the State Welfare Department for each child's care. Additional money comes for school supplies and clothing.

Sister James Marie has only been at the orphanage since last summer. She was sent to supervise the closing of the home because it was felt the closing would prove too much of an emotional tug on the sisters who had worked there for so many years.

Only six girls live at the home now compared with nearly 200 who lived there at times in the past.

"This hasn't been a hasty decision to close," Sister James Marie said. "It has been considered for several years. The mother house decided to close it and Archbishop (James P.) Davis agreed."

She added the current trend appeared to be to place children in foster homes instead of institutions.

Woman At Seminary Slated For Ministry

JOYCE MANSON
First at seminary

Joyce Manson, who said she feels working out her own theological beliefs will be a lifetime project, graduated today from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

She also will become the first woman ordained to the Presbyterian ministry by the Presbytery of San Franicsco of the United Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. The ordination service will be at her home church, First Presbyterian, Berkeley, tomorrow.

Miss Manson, 28, a native of Kansas City, Mo., has what may be a more important distinction. She is the first woman in the United States to be awarded a post-graduate urban internship by the Board of National Missions of the church.

She will take her internship for one year at Howard Presbyterian Church in the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco.

She also won the seminary's alumni fellowship for 1966, giving her funds for a year of graduate study, during the next three years, either in the United States or abroad. She said she may attend the Hebrew University in Israel or the World Council Ecumenical Institute in Switzerland.

A graduate from Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., in education, Miss Manson received a master's degree in English literature from Stanford University.

"I came to the theological seminary to get the tools to work out my own theology, in relation to my life and to those around me," she explained. "I didn't know whether I would become a minister."

A student of the history of biblical times, she spent a summer two years ago on an archeological dig in Arad, Israel.

She did her junior field work at the Menlo Park Presbyterian Church, counseling high school and college students. During the past Christmas vacation she worked two weeks on a voter registration drive in Birmingham, Ala.

At the seminary she was secretary this year to the Student Council and a member of the worship, vocations and academic commissions.

Last summer she was an intern chaplain at a mental hospital in North Dakota.

The daughter of a U.S. government employee, Miss Manson has one brother, a medical student at Northwestern University.

His work is a project of the college's religion department to train theology students for the ministry of the Seventh-Day Adventists.

Pentecost Holiday Replies To Charge That God Is Dead

Whitsunday Notes Holy Spirit, Individual's Own Experience

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

In reply to the perennial cry that "God is dead," Christianity has maintained for 2,000 years that direct, empirical proof of God's existence is available to any person who honestly seeks it.

The proof, Christians say, is the living presence of the Holy Spirit, which can be experienced by each individual for himself.

Tomorrow, Christians of all nations and denominations will join in celebrating the feast day of the Holy Spirit, known as Pentecost of Whitsunday.

Many church members have great difficulty in understanding some of the verbal formulae (such as the doctrine of the trinity) which theologians have constructed in an effort to explain who the Holy Spirit is and what He does. This is not surprising. The Bible indicates that the workings of the spirit will always remain mysterious to men. The simplest child can experience his reality, but the wisest man cannot fully comprehend it.

Those who are baffled by trinitarian terminology may find it easier to think of the Holy Spirit simply as God's active presence in the world, and particularly within the hearts and minds of human beings.

This presence was so palpable and its effects so dramatic among members of the early christian community that the New Testament is filled with awed references to the power of the spirit.

Men who were "filled with the Spirit" found themselves able to transcend limitations that had always beset them. An inarticulate fisherman like Peter became an eloquent preacher. A self-centered zealot like Paul acquired a warm and compassionate love for mankind.

In his letter to the Christian community in Galatia, Paul catalogued some of the traits of character and personality that men and women display when the Spirit takes possession of their lives.

"The fruit of the Spirit," said the apostle, "is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control."

On another occasion, Paul said that those who surrender thejr wills to the Holy Spirit are "mightily strengthened in the inner man." No matter how timid or selfish or downright nasty they might be on their own, with the help of the spirit they could become Christ-like in character.

Another realm of the spirit's activity emphasized in the New Testament is the intellect. Working through the natural processes of human thought, but at a level even deeper than intuition or the unconscious, the spirit guides men in the search for truth. And this help is not restricted to those who consciously profess religious faith. Whereever men sincerely seek the truth, the Spirit is at work. A scientist who thinks of himself as agnostic, but who is deeply dedicated to the pursuit of truth, may be much more open to the guidance of the Spirit than a religious fanatic with a closed mind.

But the Bible also teaches that the Spirit's guidance, if accepted, will ultimately lead to "knowledge of God"—a direct apprehension of the reality of God which goes far beyond mere belief in his probably existence.

The New Testament speaks often of the role of the Spirit as an inward witness, or source of assurance.

"When we cry, 'our Father,' it is the Spirit himself bearing witness with our spirit that we are children of God," Paul told the Christians of Rome.

Jesus told His disciples that the gift of the Holy Spirit is available to all who ask for it. If even sinful men are disposed to give good gifts to their children, he said on one occasion, "how much more will your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him."

Prayers for the guidance of the Holy Spirit abound in Christian liturgy. One of the shortest and best is found in the Anglican book of Common Prayer:

"O God, forasmuch as without thee we are not able to please thee: Mercifully grant that thy Holy Spirit may in all things direct and rule our hearts."

Senior Citizens Give Unitarian Sermon

The question of whether senior citizens are being isolated from society will be considered by five older members of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin in tomorrow's service at 11 a.m.

Ellen Weil, Margaret Best, Paula Kaufmann, George Phelps and Wallace Kibbee will make statements on "How Lost Is 'The Lost Generation?'"

'Magnifying Christ'

"Be a Living Memorial Magnifying Christ" will be the theme of the Bible exposition by Pastor Byron W. Ross at the Marin Central Church at its new address, 260 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley, at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Andretti Slight Favorite In 500-Mile Race Monday

By DALE BURGESS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — One of sports' biggest crowds began filling Indianapolis hostelries and side streets today, chattering about what makes Mario Andretti move so fast and whether he can do it for 500 miles Monday.

A nationwide poll of 68 auto race writers established the little Italian-born driver as the favorite, a status he already enjoyed on the basis of a record-breaking qualification at 165.899 miles an hour for the Golden Anniversary 500-mile auto race.

There were plenty of skeptics, however.

Against Andretti's 20 votes, defending champion Jimmy Clark of Scotland received 16; Dan Gurney, Californian who races on the Grand Prix circuit, 11; two-time winner A. J. Foyt of Houston, 7; and former winner Parnelli Jones, 7.

Lloyd Ruby, Wichita Falls, Tex., and Gordon Johncock, Hastings, Mich., received two votes each, and Cale Yarborough, Charlotte, N.C., one.

Fans, possibly 300,000 on hand or en route, hoped for a better contest than the 1965 race. Clark and Foyt were the only leaders, and Clark had no opposition after the former American champion's engine failed.

But it could be another runaway if Andretti's rebuilt Brabham-Ford, third last year, holds together.

Carl Williams of Kansas City, a standout among the seven first-time starters, commented: "If Andretti runs real consistent instead of trying to make it a trophy dash, he can lead most of the way. He runs easy a couple of miles an hour faster than the rest of us when we're hurrying."

The odds were heavy against the rookies, who included England's Graham Hill, a former world road racing champion; Jackie Stewart of Scotland, the Monaco Grand Prix winner last Sunday; and Americans Yarborough, Gary Congdon, Garden Grove, Calif.; Mel Kenyon, Davenport, Iowa; and Larry Dickson, Marietta, Ohio.

No first-time starter has won the race since George Souders of Lafayette, Ind., in 1927.

Rodger Ward, Indianapolis, is the only former winner in the field besides Clark, Foyt and Jones. He and Jones will be driving cars with supercharged Offenhauser engines, new power plants which haven't been as effective in practice as the special Fords pushing Andretti, Clark, Gurney and most of the other high ranking drivers.

The switch to rear-engine cars, started three years ago, lacked reaching 100 per cent by a single vehicle. Veteran Bobby Grim of Indianapolis made the lineup with a front engine car, but it has a new turbocharged Offenhauser which performed beautifully in the trials.

Speedway veterans expect the winner to ride behind one of the bigger, unsupercharged Ford racing engines like the one that powered Clark's Lotus last year.

The field, with 22 Fords and 11 Offys, averaged a record 160.251 m.p.h. in the trials against 153.774 last year. Clark's 1965 record for the full race was 150.686.

Driver Chuck Rodee of Indianapolis was killed in a qualifying run May 14, bringing to 57 the number of persons who have been killed at the speedway since it opened in 1909 with a series of short races. The 500 was inaugurated in 1911, with Ray Harroun, still an interested spectator at the age of 87, winning at 74.59 m.p.h.

Tourney Of Champions Notes: Scouts Flock To Ogle Talent

CHAMPS TOURNAMENT SHORTS:

Those five home runs yesterday were the first circuit smashes in the last two years of the tourney, according to Director Al Endriss.

Yesterday's total attendance of 1,000 pushed the two-day mark to an estimated 4,000, well ahead of expectations. With Marin Catholic playing two games today to lure the local crowd, the attendance record should approach the 7,000 mark.

MARIN CATHOLIC Coach Gary Hughes has had phenomenal success in the coin-flipping league. This morning he won his third straight coin-toss for home team privileges against Napa. Thursday he won the flip against Westmoor and Tuesday night—in the big flip of the year—he beat Tam and Novato for the right to represent Marin in this high school classic. Hughes should be in Reno with that kind of luck!

Eddie Montague Jr., first baseman for Westmoor High, is the son of the San Francisco Giant scout who signed Willie Mays to his first contract.

ENDRISS ESTIMATES there are approximately 25 professional scouts at every game. Every major league club is represented, some by two bird dogs, pens poised for the dollar war.

Ralph Chatoian calls it to our attention that three players from Arroyo have the unique distinction of playing in their second Tournament of Champions—in different sports—in the last three months.

They are Steve Desimone, Jerry Stevenson and Paul Travares who played for Arroyo's victorious basketball T of C team in Berkeley in March and followed that up by leading their school's baseball club into the Redwood classic.

Desimone, notes Chatoian, is really a cool cat. His jersey number for both basketball and baseball is 13.

ELSEWHERE AROUND THE SPORTS BEAT:

DRAKE SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION'S Marin Car and Boat Show last weekend was proclaimed a "genuine success" by Foundation President Merrill "Mike" Convis who said plans for a second annual event next spring already are being discussed.

"Enough money was raised to finance two scholarships," said Convis. He also noted that one third of the trophy winners came from outside Marin, ranging from Sunnyvale to Sacramento.

JOHNNY BOCCABELLA'S dislocated elbow is mending slowly and the Chicago Cubs utility man's inactivity may be longer than expected, says his pop-in-law, Ray Leonardi of San Rafael.

Ray said the Cub trainer told Johnny Sock that once he returns to action the elbow probably will hurt like the dickens whenever he swings and misses.

I'm sure Manager Leo Durocher's advice will be: "Don't miss!"

FRED C. REYNDERS and Henry Landauer, both of San Rafael, will be the two refs for the international soccer games in San Francisco the nights of June 1 and 8.

The games are to be played in Kezar Stadium, 8:15. June 1 is Glasgow Celtics from Scotland vs. Tottenham Hotspur from Londan, and June 8 its Celtic vs. Bayern Munchen from Munich, Germany.

MENTION HERE the other day that Marin Catholic High's last championship came in the 1961 baseball season brought the following correction:

"Dear Sir: The only Marin Catholic varsity championship in Marin League play prior to 1966 was earned by the baseball team of 1962. I just thought this should be clarified.

"Members of the team were pitchers Frank Burch, Dave Beswick, and John Forsythe; catchers John Winters, Joe Hebel and Mike Hebel; fielders John Odetto, John Drews, Mike Cabarrus and Pat Murray; infielders Hank Ryan (first base), Frank Ubhaus (second bace), Jerry Smith (shortstop), Bob Williams (third base); Coach Harry Moore.

"We have all enjoyed your column but since our only prior complete hour of sport glory has been seemingly forgotten we could no longer suffer in silence.

"Yours truly,

"Virginia M. Ubhaus."

LOCAL WINNER: Ex-San Rafael High star Mike Shafer won the 880 for Cal in last night's Big Meet against Stanford. His time was 1:52.7.

5 Homers In Second Day's Play

By ROBBIE HARVEY

Napa High School's Indians, representing the North Bay League, opened the second day of the Redwood Baseball Tournament of Champions yesterday by trimming Arroyo of Hayward 6-5 for their second straight victory at San Rafael's Albert Park.

In the second of yesterday's three games, Lincoln of the Mount Hamilton League outlasted Skyline of Oakland Athletic League 8-6 in a home-run Derby that saw four of the day's five homers sail over the fences.

And in the nightcap under the lights Monterey of the Monterey Bay League edged El Cerrito of the Alameda League 1-0 in a brilliant pitchers' duel.

Today's jam-packed seven-game schedule opened at 10 a.m. when Marin Catholic, the "Cinderella" Marin League representative which tipped Westmoor of Daly City 2-1 Thursday behind Ben Burch's two-hitter, tried to stop the hot Napa bats (see page one of main news section). Other games today were scheduled for noon, a pair at 2 p.m. (one at Kentfield), 4 p.m., 6 o'clock (for third place) and the championship battle at 8 o'clock.

All told, yesterday's three games produced five homers as compared to none the previous day, when Arroyo shelled St. Elizabeth's of the Catholic League 7-1, and Marin Catholic downed Westmoor.

NAPA RALLY

Yesterday, after Arroyo's Dons had scored twice in the top of the first, consecutive singles by Jim Ariano, and brothers Bill and Bob Buckner ignited a four-run first inning Napa rally. Bob Buckner's safety drove Ariano across with the first tally. Then came a sacrifice bunt, an error, a sacrifice fly, a hit batter and Steve Cerini, second baseman, capping the explosion with a single to right field.

With Napa leading 6-2 in the seventh and final inning, catcher Dave Silva started a three-run Arroyo rally with a solo home run off starter George White, but reliever Doug Heskett came on to quell the uprising.

White went six full innings, walked 5 and fanned 4.

That Lincoln game was halted after six innings by the tourney

RAIDERS VS. RAMS

Gabriel Case May Wind Up In Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Who owns Roman Gabriel?

"We do," say both the National Football League's Los Angeles Rams and the Oakland Raiders, who belong to the American Football League.

Eventually, it might take a court to decide the issue.

The Rams announced Thursday that they had signed Gabriel to a 1966-67 contract with an option on his services for 1968.

Later, Oakland manager Gordon Stirling said that quarterback Gabriel had signed a four-year pact with his team (1967 - 1970) and that the quarterback would play out his option with the Rams this season.

"If Gabriel has signed a contract with the Rams he has violated our agreement," said Stirling. "But we'll know for sure if he has signed."

Gabriel said that he signed a contract with the Rams after "turning down a far more lucrative offer from the AFL."

By not flatly denying that he had signed a Raider contract, Gabriel left the door open for speculation as to a future court fight between the two clubs.

According to Stirling the Raiders probably will take the case to court if that is the only alternative left to them.

Fans Boo Sadecki; Giants Need Help

Ray Fails Again; L.A. Tops Mets

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

When the San Francisco Giants acquired pitcher Ray Sadecki three weeks ago, Vice President Chub Feeney said:

"He should help us for a long time."

Someone, however, better start helping Sadecki.

The 25-year-old left-hander was battered from the mound for the fourth straight time since coming to the Giants as the Philadelphia Phillies crushed the Giants 9-2 last night at Candlestick Park.

The Giants sent slugger Orlando Cepeda to St. Louis for Sadecki May 8, and there were many who felt the deal clinched the National League pennant for San Francisco.

Giant pitching coach Larry Jansen didn't say that, but he recalled the 1964 season when Sadecki won 20 games in helping the Cardinals win the pennant.

"He had a superb change of pace and a hard, rising fast ball," Jansen said. "He fouled up the hitters' timing by giving them fast balls, a strong curve and then the expertly thrown change."

But Sadecki hasn't been able to foul up anyone lately.

ASTRONOMICAL ERA

In four starts with the Giants he has lasted only 13 1-3 innings while allowing 11 runs for an astronomical 7.62 earned run average.

Take away his first start in which the New York Mets scored three unearned runs off him in five innings, and his ERA is an even more astronomical 12.38.

By most standards Sadecki should be depressed. But darned if he isn't cheerful.

"I can't wait to get that first one," Sadecki bubbled after the game.

Neither can San Francisco fans, 16,603 of whom booed Sadecki loudly in his only plate appearance.

His latest effort ended before he could get anyone out in the fifth inning. The Phillies already had scored three runs in the first four innings, and when John Callison and Dick Groat singled in the fifth, Manager Herman Franks decided Sadecki needed help.

The Giants may need some, too. They've won only five of their last 13 games, and they must do without their No. 2 pitcher, Gaylord Perry, for the next 15 days. Perry, suffering from a sore ankle, was placed on the disabled list Friday night.

DODGERS WIN

In other National League games, Los Angeles blanked New York 4-0, Pittsburgh whipped Houston 6-0, Cincinnati edged St. Louis 6-5 and Atlanta defeated Chicago 5-3.

In the American League, Cleveland edged Minnesota 5-4.

After getting rid of Sadecki, the Phillies went on to score six runs in the fifth, four on run-scoring singles by Bill White, Bob Uecker, Bobby Wine and Cookie Rojas. Willie McCovey and Tom Haller homered for the Giants Claude Osteen broke a personal four-game losing streak, gaining his first victory in a month with a three-hitter over the Mets. Los Angeles scored all four of its runs in the sixth inning with the help of errors by Bill Murphy, Ken Boyer and Dick Stuart.

Bob Veale and Pete Mikkelsen combined for a five-hitter against Houston. Bill Mazeroski and Willie Stargell led the Pittsburgh attack, each hitting a homer and driving in two runs.

Cincinnati's first three hits off St. Louis' Art Mahaffey were homers — two by Vada Pinson and one by Tommy Helms. Jim Maloney needed help from Billy McCool in the seventh but still gained his fifth victory without a defeat.

Atlanta outhomered the Cubs as Hank Aaron, Joe Torre and Mack Jones connected in support of Wade Blasingame. Aaron's homer was his 16th. Billy Williams and Ron Santo homered for Chicago.

Napa, Monterey, Lincoln Win In Champs Tourney

time limit, which states that unless the score is tied, no new inning will start after 1 hour and 45 minutes of play. An exception to that ruling is tonight's championship game.

Deadlocked at 2-2 in the third, Lincoln's Mike Ross and Ray Silva both hammered two-run homers, highlighting a four-run uprising; but not to be beaten easily, Bob White, Skyline's centerfielder, knocked one over the fence with two aboard in the bottom of the third, capping a four-run Titan spree.

From the fourth inning on, Lincoln hurler Ken Escobar stymied the Titans as his teammates managed another run in the fourth and, with one down in the sixth, Lincoln's shortstop Bob Seeger sent a drive over the left-field fence, climaxing the scoring and the home-run Derby.

The final tussle was an enjoyable pitching duel between right-hander Frank (you pronounce it) Prestigiacomo of Monterey's Toreadors, and southpaw Ron Pisani of El Cerrito's Gauchos.

In the top of the first inning, the first three Toreador hitters accounted for the only run of the game.

Centerfielder Jeoff Coleman led off with a bloop single to right-center and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Jerry Mendonsa. Then catcher Larry Hill hit an infield grounder to the infield and Coleman came all the way around to score on an over-throw at first, Hill going to second on the error.

It was only after a thrilling seventh-inning rally that the action was over, however.

Prestigiacomo, who went the distance and whiffed six while spinning a two-hitter, finally started hanging his curve a little in the seventh. With Doug Luna's sizzling line drive to center highlighting the action, the Gauchos had runners on second and third with just one down and the Toreador chucker was in his biggest trouble of the night. But the last batter he faced grounded out to shortstop and the thrilling inning finished the pitching duel.

Pisani, relieved by first sacker Les Cain when the Toreadors threatened in their half of the seventh, struck out 10, scattered just three base hits and walked seven.

Draw In L.A. Bout; Promoters Kayoed

LOS ANGELES (AP)— After 20 rounds of fighting, California heavyweight Jerry Quarry and Tony Alongi of Paterson, N. J., still haven't decided who is the better fighter.

The 21-year-old Quarry, still unbeaten, and Alongi wrestled and punched 10 rounds to a unanimous draw last night, matching their efforts in New York last March over the same route.

Quarry, 192, has three draws and 17 victories, while Alongi, 204, is 39-2-3.

There were no knockdowns in a fight that closed viciously, and the main damage was to the promoters, Civic Boxing Enterprises, Inc., an organization which promotes infrequently.

The crowd in the 15,000 - seat Sports Arena was 5,444, which was 7,000 fewer than anticipated.

Alongi's manager, Lou Duba, said he would like a rematch with the young man from suburban Bellflower, but seemed singularly uninterested in coming back under the same promotional banner.

The first problem came when it was discovered there were no stools for the seconds in each corner. This was remedied without too much difficulty.

Then there was no resin in the corners, and Referee Tommy Hart, to prevent slippage, ordered the water bottles to be liberally sprinkled on the canvas to give the fighters traction.

The show was supposed to go on at 8 p.m. and got off the ground 45 minutes later. The main event, slated for 9 p.m., swept into action one hour and 20 minutes later.

The ring announcer intrigued the crowd when he announced that one bout had been decided by a majority decision. Matchmaker Howie Steindler persuaded the announcer to haul down the mike and advise the fans that it was a split decision.

The usual number of fighters was introduced along with a television director, who was given full screen credits. The announcer looked like an actor.

Possibly the only orthodox part of the show came from the rival dressing rooms. Each fighter was convinced that he had won.

Action On Northern Cal Speedways

Big Memorial Day weekend hardtop racing programs have been lined up for tonight in Vallejo and Petaluma.

At Vallejo Speedway, a 50-lap main event will highlight the weekly card which begins tonight with time trials 7:30 and heat racing at 8:30.

More than 60 drivers are expected to be on hand for the Bay Cities Racing Assn. action at Vallejo. The card will include 10 races, climaxed by the 50-lapper.

Promoter George Acree anticipates a crowd of more than 3,500 for tonight's Vallejo show. In seven night to date, there has yet to be a repeat main event winner.

The feature race at the Petaluma Fairgrounds tonight will be 100 laps, with the 30 fastest qualifiers competing. Promoter John J. Soares of NASCAR has guaranteed a $1,000 purse for drivers and expects a big field to compete for the money.

Qualifying starts at 7 p.m., with racing beginning at 8 p.m. There will be one heat race, a trophy dash, and a 20-lap semi-main in addition to the big one.

In drag racing action tonight, it will be the regularly scheduled drags at the Vaca Valley Drag Strip near Vacaville, with time trials starting at 4 p.m. and eliminations at 9:30 p.m.

At the fifth annual Gas, Coupe and Sedan drag race last Saturday night at the Vaca Valley strip, Jim James of San Rafael won the trophy in Class CMP with a speed of 106 miles per hour and an elapsed time of 13 seconds.

Detroit Lions Reinstate End Gail Cogdill

DETROIT (AP) — Gail Cogdill is back in the good graces of the Detroit Lions, but is out $1,000.

The National Football League club lifted yesterday the suspension on Cogdill that lasted 108 nonfootball playing days and said it had fined him $1,000 for criticizing Head Coach Harry Gilmer and several teammates in a speech at Flint, Mich., last Feb. 3.

The club's policy is to send camp invitations around the end of May so players can plan their vacations and let off-season employers know when they'll be leaving. The Lions took the opportunity to end Cogdill's suspension. Camp opens July 18.

The 29-year-old end made his remarks to a women's club in Flint. He made a public apology to Gilmer and the team after being indefinitely suspended for the remarks.

San Diego Youth Long Jumps 25-5¼

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Doyle Steel, 18, has bettered the national high school record in the long jump with a leap of 25 feet, 5¼ inches.

The recognized record of 25-4¾ was set last year by John Johnson of Pacific Grove.

Steel, 6-foot-3 and 165 pounds, represented San Diego High School Friday night in a California Interscholastic Federation meet.

Pott Has Lead In Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Johnny Pott, the two-day leader in the $57,000 Oklahoma City Open Golf Tournament, isn't a bit unhappy with the Oklahoma weather.

The winds that "come whistling down the plain" have been whispering a soft background melody as Pott, 30, has fashioned a four-stroke lead with an 11-under par 133 total for 36 holes over the 7,173-yard Quail Creek Golf and Country Club course.

"The weather has been beautiful," Pott said in near amazement. "There has been no wind at all, and the greens are in perfect shape."

Pott figured the touring professionals were due for a weather break because, he said, he's seen more rain this year than any tour deserves.

"Most of the time this year," Pott said, "You simply teed up and got out your umbrella and rain suit."

One of the two men four strokes behind Pott — 23-year-old Tom Weiskopf — also was impressed by the lack of wind. Weiskopf said he was nearly blown off the tee at Quail Creek in National Open qualifying earlier this week.

FOUR STROKES

Pott's four stroke lead equals the largest 36-hole margins of this year's tour. Both times previously, the leader has faded.

With Weiskopf at 137 was Tony Lema, who was almost two strokes closer, but was also almost out of the tournament entirely.

Lema sustained a two stroke penalty for an improper drop from ground under repair, and had he signed his scorecard without declaring the penalty, it would have meant disqualification.

But Quail Creek pro Ernie Vossler called the mistake to Lema's attention, and he took the penalty which wiped out a sparkling 66 for the day.

Three golfers — Don Massengale, Bruce Devlin and Butch Baird — are at 140, followed by the rest of the field of 78 qualifiers ranging from 141 to 148.

Masters champion Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, the defending National Open king, are at 143 and 146, respectively.

Braves Get Reliever From Cubs

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves announced today that they have traded first baseman Lee Thomas to the Chicago Cubs for relief pitcher Ted Abernathy.

A club spokesman said the move was an attempt to bolster the Braves pitching corps, and that the team still has plenty of potential first base strength in Joe Torre, Gene Oliver, Felipe Alou and Denis Menke.

Abernathy, 33, was named National League reliever of the year last season, when he appeared in 84 games, posted a 2.58 earned run average and won four games while losing six.

Thomas, 30, was acquired from the Boston Red Sox during the off season. He has been hitting about .200 this year.

For the current season, Abernathy has a 1-3 record and has a 6.23 ERA for 18 games compared with 2.58 last season.

START 'EM EARLY—Little Norenne Myers, daughter of Mrs. Pam Myers of Bolinas Road, Fairfax, is doing what should come naturally to Marinites—and would mean a cleaner county. She's utilizing one of the spanking new trash cans placed in downtown Fairfax in connection with the city's clean-up, paint-up, fix-up campaign to get rid of some waste paper.

Three Cities Cleaning Up

Corte Madera, Fairfax and Novato are getting a face-lifting as city governments, civic organizations and citizens launch efforts in several directions to paint up, fix up, clean up and generally spruce up the cities.

Corte Madera's cleanup time anticipates the city's 50th anniversary celebration June 10, 11 and 12. Fairfax is trying for the national cleanest town achievement award of the National Clean-Up — Paint Up — Fix Up Bureau of Washington, D.C.

Novato is just doing it to be doing it.

Three youngsters have made a profit on the campaign in Fairfax. In a clean-up poster contest in the schools, Eric Weiss, a second-grader at Manor School, won $10, Tommy Cronin, a fourth-grader at St. Rita's Parochial School won $5, and Bobby Springett, a seventh-grader at St. Rita's, won $2.50.

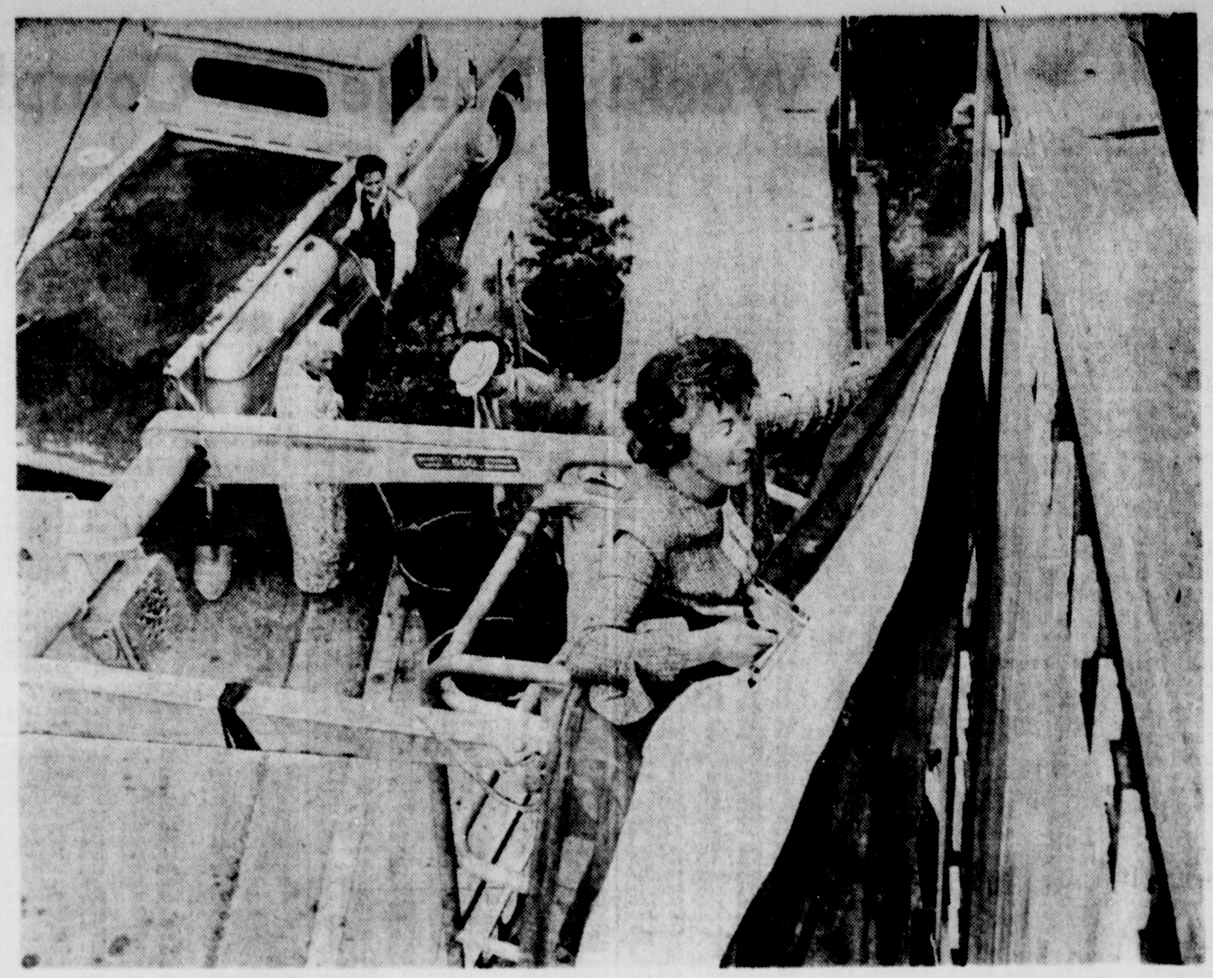
The Fairfax campaign also includes new debris boxes and trash boxes, a row of Japanese privets trees which have been planted along Broadway, and planting at the schools by the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, 4-H, and Campfire Girls.

The youngsters also distributed 2,700 litter bags and flower seeds door to door.

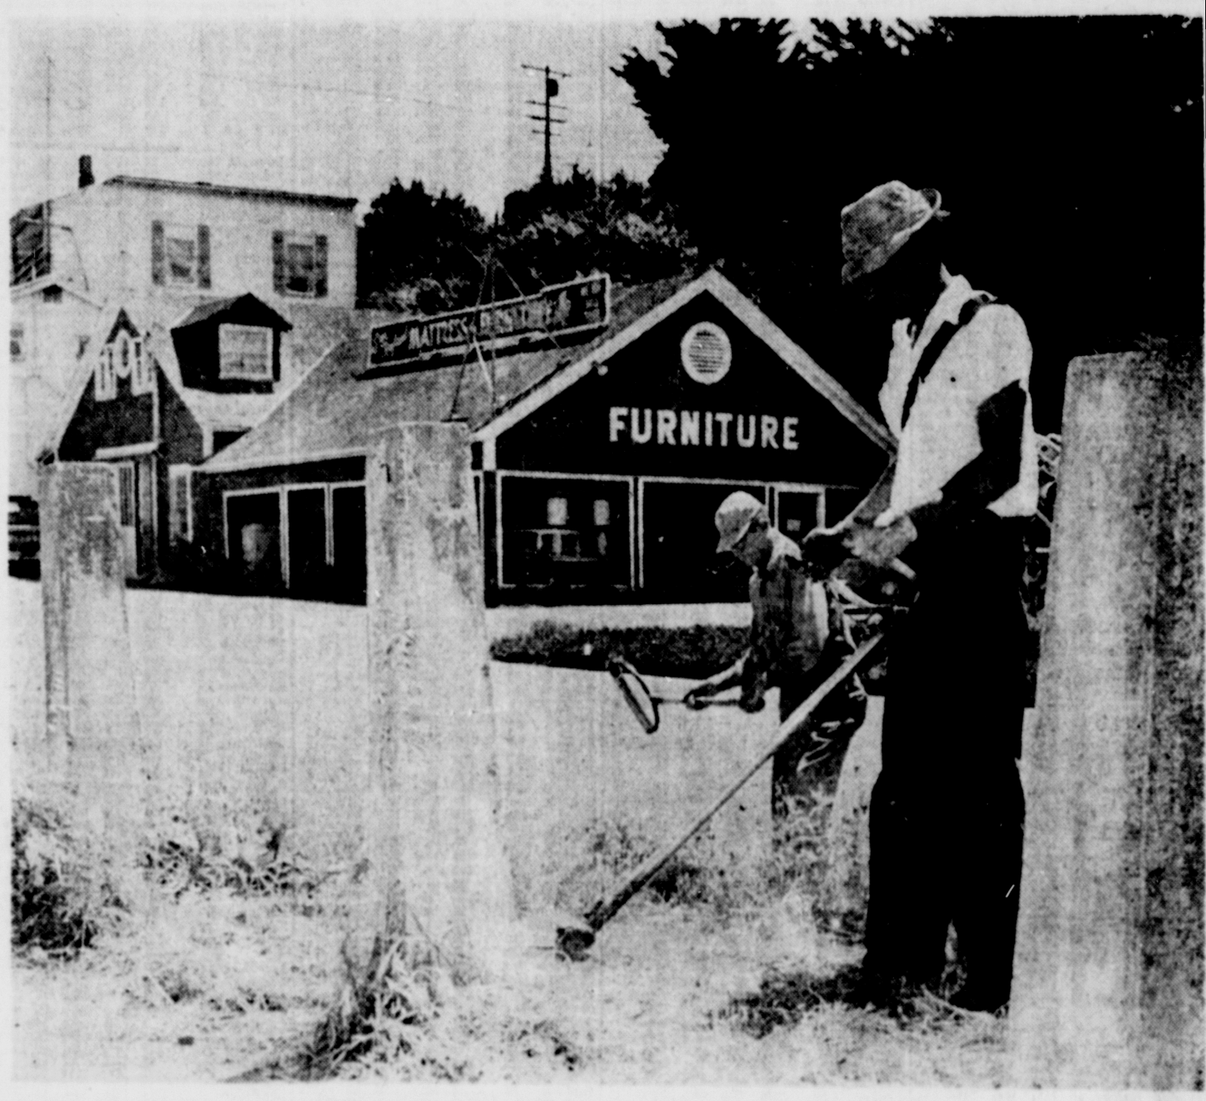
In Novato, city crews are conducting a roadside cleanup project, and Novato Disposal Service is running extra trash pickups. The San Marin Homeowners Association is cleaning the area around Novato Creek, and the Novato Garden Club is pulling weeds along Grant Avenue.

Two bus stops in the village square in Corte Madera are getting repaired, with materials from Greyhound and work from the Boy Scouts. One is being completely rebuilt, the other repaired and painted.

Marin Estates Homeowners Association is in charge of weed pulling around Corte Madera, and the Girls Scouts are distributing litter bags. Mariner Highlands Improvement Assn. is planting trees from the city nursery, and the Village Square Assn. is planting in the square.



PRETTYING UP CORTE MADERA—Corte Madera is not only cleaning up; it's prettying up, too, for the town's 50th anniversary celebration. Mrs. Charles Volk stapled bunting to building as part of the prettying up—standing on platform of a "cherry picker" provided by Comco Signal Co. of Danville.



LOTS OF WORK INVOLVED — Just hanging bunting won't make Corte Madera pretty. Weeds must be cleaned along streets, too. Workers of the town's street department drew that assignment. Paul Eichel is the man in forgeround.

PLANTING, TOO—Costumes presumably like those of four decades ago were donned by Corte Maderans to add a festival atmosphere to the job of readying their town for its celebration. The woman planting the tree in street planter box is Mrs. J. C. Bordanaro. The boy in the skimmer is Ben Simpson.

DOWN TO GRASSROOTS—Novato High School boys drew the assignment of picking up debris in Novato's city-wide cleanup campaign. Among boys collecting the beer cans that less thoughtful people threw away to litter the landscape was Bill Rule.

TREES FOR FAIRFAX—Shooting for an All-American clean city award, Fairfax is beautifying in more ways than one. Trees are being planted along Main Street in front of business places. City employees Russell Grasso (with cap) and George Gray planted this one.

Tam Valley District Plans May Exclude Almonte Area

A reorganization committee, studying the proposed creation of a Tamalpais Valley community services district, has recommended that the portion of the Almonte Sanitary District included in the proposed district's original boundaries be excluded.

The recommendation came from the reorganization committee named by the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission. It also included these proposals:

The Tamalpais Valley Sanitary District would be absorbed.

Kay Park Sewer Maintenance District, also within the boundaries of the proposed CSD, would continue to be operated by the county.

A portion of the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District is also within the proposed CSD.

Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows said the reorganization committee tentatively set June 16 for its next meeting, to hear a report on the reaction of Marin Municipal Water District management to the suggestion that the proposed CSD might eventually establish a sewer plant and outfall at Tennessee Cove on the Pacific Coast.

Tamalpais Valley Home Burglarized

Loss of $400 worth of loot in burglary of the home of David C. Harris, 455 Marin Drive, Tamalpais Valley, was reported yesterday by sheriff's officers.

Harris said entry was by climbing through a window. Taken were a television set, a radio, kitchen electrical appliances, a pair of binoculars, and a camera.

Harry F. Wagner Sr., of Sonoma, told officers a duck-hunting shack southwest of Inverness was entered by prying a window. Nothing was taken however.

would you pay the price of 10 gallons of gas to keep Marin beautiful?

That's about what the average homeowner will pay per year to finance new parkland.

The Editor's Notebook

He Was Honest And Kind, Totally Without Pretense

" . . . HIS KINDLY INTEREST in my efforts inspired me and I kept on to make journalism a career.

" . . . Justus is my friend, and the best test of that friendship is that it has endured (for 50 years), due to his unquestioned loyalty, his generous advice and happy companionship.

" . . . I have never known a fellow of greater drive, intense energy and unfailing devotion to a cause.

" . . . Craemer has shown through all his life outstanding ability as a newspaper publisher and businessman, a capable executive in public positions, and a comprehensive knowledge of state and national affairs.

" . . . No man in the country has a finer record of devotion to constructive work for organizations devoted to the advancement and welfare of his profession.

" . . . He will never quit throwing his energies and abilities into every cause that means better newspapers for California and America.

" . . . FROM THE BEGINNING of his career, he has always spent a full day at his job, whether in his newspaper work or for his government, and almost without exception has then devoted an average of another full day to his friends, his party, his state and his country.

" . . . I can only write in the highest terms of his contributions to humanity, the newspaper business, the State of California, his friends and his family.

" . . . Throughout his long career as a public servant by appointment of several governors of the State he has distinguished himself by his deeds of high accomplishment.

" . . . I commend him as a most distinguished Christian gentleman.

" . . . NO OTHER CALIFORNIAN in our time has enjoyed a career of such fruitful professional and administrative service to his state. The responsibilities of all these offices of honor and trust were met with extraordinary skill and fidelity to the canons of virtuous public service.

" . . . He possesses the rare ability to engage a person in conversation in such a manner that news pours off that individual without his ever suspecting that he has said anything of interest.

" . . . A man of imagination and foresight, his mind works in rapid-fire fashion like a machine gun and out of it all comes enough ideas to keep the whole staff jumping all day.

" . . . His manner seemed gruff to a newcomer, but soon I learned that it wasn't, for beneath the surface was a kindly, fair and generous man who expected a day's work for a day's pay, but in return the employees were secure in the knowledge that so long as they did their jobs they had nothing to fear. That feeling of security was important during those depression days.

" . . . Out of the enthusiasm and the ideas poured forth by Justus have come countless improvements in newspapers and countless suggestions which have helped many a newspaperman over a hump.

" . . . There are some among us who have wondered how anybody who talks so fast and thinks so fast can find the time to listen, too. But the facts show that Justus' ears are open all the time. They further show that he has an open mind into which a lot of good ideas fall, to be dropped along the way as other open minds are ready to receive them.

" . . . MOST PUBLISHERS shun dry statistics and tax figures, but not the inquisitive soul who spent many years on the Public Utilities Commission. Tearing through them as he tears through life, Justus extracted vital information that stimulated and aided each and every one of us.

" . . . You do not have to be a close friend of this man to have had benefits from him. He is tireless in his self-appointed task of helping others. Never is he so busy that he gives the brush-off to anybody.

" . . . A bright and shining personality in our midst who took away all gloom and established himself at once as one who was both companionable and sincere. Somebody we wished to know always because he was without pretense.

" . . . What he has, he has made himself. It is all well earned and deserved. But he is too fond of other people, with a consideration of their welfare, to be consumed by vaulting ambition. He considers it a victory when some deserving person he knows and has helped reaches an achievement.

" . . . A man is best known by those who know him and recognize him for his talents. Justus in his political career has been the associate and intimate of big men in the country, starting at the top with several presidents and down the list with governors, senators and statesmen. He knows people in all walks of life and they in turn know him well and hold him in high regard."

THESE ARE THINGS of which funeral orations are made.

It is often said after funerals, "Too bad the deceased wasn't around to hear all the high compliments and genuine expressions of deep respect and admiration."

Justus, my father, was more fortunate than most men, in many ways. Before he began the long, long decline which ended in his death this week, he was the recipient of 70th birthday testimonials.

All of the statements above were made by the great and near-great who took part. All of them were made in writing and now are treasured heirlooms.

WHAT SHOULD A FATHER be to a growing boy?

Certainly he can be no more than a near-perfect example of unselfish concern for the welfare of others, a man of complete and thorough honesty and integrity, generous and kind, and totally without pretension.

As Justus, my father, approaches the gates of heaven, he unquestionably will be welcomed. But his humility is such that the welcome will seem to him undeserved, a surprise.

He will be recognized for having accomplished so much. But he personally will lament having accomplished so little.

Those of us he leaves behind lament that they aren't making any more like him.

—Jack Craemer

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Taxpayers Urged To Make Selves Heard

Editor, Independent-Journal:

As the Independent-Journal recently indicated, the board of directors of the Greenbrae Property Owners Assn. recently passed a resolution condemning the high property taxes in Marin County. We are becoming greatly concerned with the steady rise in property taxes and the burden being placed on the property owner to pay these taxes.

We realize that it is difficult for a few individuals to stop the steady rise in taxes, but we feel a united effort by property owners' associations and individual citizens could do something about the problem.

Therefore, by means of this letter, we are asking all property owners' associations and individual taxpayers to urge the Marin County supervisors, respective city councils, school boards, and other taxing jurisdictions to review all of their expenditures to make certain that only essential improvements and services are being contracted and that they minimize waste and inefficiency in their jurisdictions.

In order to help accomplish this, we strongly recommend that all interested taxpayers attend the budget sessions of these organizations to insure that only essential items are included in the respective budgets, and that spending is kept at a minimum.

We also feel that the matter of taxes should be a major question of the candidates in the forthcoming election, and that they and the incumbent officials should strive to obtain a broader and more equitable tax base than we now have.

It is our firm belief that something has to be done about the high property taxes in Marin County, and being heard during budget sessions and on election day are two of the best ways to accomplish this.

JOHN E. KOSTER
President, Greenbrae Property Owners Assn.

Cooperation Good From College

Editor, Independent-Journal:

At the completion of my second year as tennis coach at Redwood High School, I would like to express publicly my appreciation for the treatment my team and I have received from the College of Marin Athletic Department. Redwood, the only high school in the MCAL with no tennis courts, has been forced to borrow the facilities of the college for practices and home matches. The cooperation we have received from Mr. Harry Piper, Athletic Director, and Mr. Dick Reed, Tennis Coach, has been overwhelming. They have gone so far as to reschedule or cancel their team practices to accommodate our schedule.

On one occasion a player who became ill during a match was given immediate attention by the college athletic trainer, Mr. Hinklin. This type of neighborly cooperation between schools is heart-warming and greatly appreciated by the Redwood Tennis Team.

Young Musicians Deserve Credit

Editor, Independent-Journal:

A recent letter to the editor, signed Professor Kolitsch, served to discredit the Marin Youth Symphony and its talented director, Hugo Rinaldi. The professor thus reveals himself as ignorant. A number of talented musicians from the Youth Symphony receive high musical awards each year, as well as college scholarships. The continuing fine concerts presented by the Youth Symphony reflect the skill and knowledge of its able leader, as well as the industry and devotion of the young musicians.

Let us hope the destructive criticism of the professor will not dampen the ardor of our young musicians.

Don Luis Arguello, Early Days Recalled

Editor, Independent-Journal

Your edition of May 24 inst. offered the interesting obituary of Alexander Luis Arguello, whose ancestors five generations removed, Don Luis Dario Arguello, was commandante of the Presidio of San Francisco.

Don Luis rose through the ranks of the Royal Army in his native province of Queretaro. Never a member of the Ansa expedition, he was in the year 1781 leading an advance detachment of Fernando Rivera's colonists to California when Rivera was fallen upon by the Yumas at the crossing of the Colorado and slaughtered together with a number of his followers. Arguello proceeded unscathed to his destination. At the expiration of eight years in California, Arguello was named commandant at San Francisco, not the first, however, for that would be a grave slight to Ansa's lieutenant Jose Joaquin Moraga, who had erected and dedicated this, the second presidio in Alta, California, in the year 1776.

Popular as he was humble and devout, Don Luis was father of the tragically romantic Concepcion, as well as a son Luis, the latter destined to become the first governor of California in the Mexican era, as well as being instrumental in the founding of an asistencia to Mission Dolores at San Rafael—the so-called Mission San Rafael.

In 1815 Don Jose was appointed governor of Baja California, serving at Loreto without recompense for seven years until his office expired when Spanish rule terminated throughout all of New Spain. In age and poverty he retired and perished at Guadalajara in the early years of the Mexican era.

Young Democrats Hit School Board Action

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Last night's (May 24) meeting of the San Rafael School District's Board of Education, held at Terra Linda High School, proved to be an eye-opener to the Marin Young Democrats who attended.

We fully expected to see the operation of the democratic process, but found, instead, only the squelching of the freedom we as Americans cherish most—freedom of speech.

A teacher from San Rafael High School as asked by the board of education to refrain from reading his letter of resignation, because it criticized several members of the board. A lawyer from the Civil Liberties Union rose in behalf of the teacher to remind the board of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America, which provides for free speech.

These then are the questions: Is the Democracy we support Democracy in word only? What has happened to democracy in action?

Congressional Committees Earn Protests Over Rude Questions

WASHINGTON — It's about time that members of Congressional committees hearing top Administration officials showed them the same courtesy and respect they usually show each other.

THEY HAVEN'T been doing so recently.

The recurring attitude of some committees is: Let's tear 'em apart. And then they go about it with a bludgeon, as though the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of State were an intruder of dubious intention and guilty of everything in the book until proven innocent.

It isn't good enough. It isn't worthy of a mature democracy.

Isn't it time for these Congressional committees to grow up?

All the Congressmen would have to do is to be themselves. Individually they are nearly all pretty good human beings. But when they come together in committee, they tend to take on a rasping, irascible mood which serves no good purpose.

ONE OF the worst offenders is the Senate Foreign Relations Committee under the guidance of Chairman J. William Fulbright.

It is possible that the veteran members of the Fulbright committee have become so used to this sort of thing that they are hardly aware of it and certainly not shocked by it.

Only a new member could feel the impact of the discourtesy and disdain recently shown Secretary Dean Rusk. It hit Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., so sharply that he just couldn't keep from protesting and got sarcastically scolded by Fulbright.

What happened? Secretary Rusk had begun his testimony by stating in detail why the U.S. is fighting in Viet Nam. He had not gone far before Senator Morse lashed out at him as though he were a criminal in the dock. He accused him of misusing the hearing, of dragging in "propaganda" on Viet Nam when the committee wanted to hear about something else. The Secretary was accused of trickery.

Mr. Rusk had to sit impugned and impaled by the onslaught until Senator McGee began to raise some questions.

WASN'T IT true that at the last committee meeting, Senator Case had asked Rusk to give a statement the next time the committee met on why we are in Viet Nam? It was true.

Wasn't it true that Senator Fulbright had said, "I agree with that — excellent suggestion"? It was true.

Wasn't it true that at its previous session Chairman Fulbright had raised two questions about Viet Nam and had said to Rusk, "Our time is running out and I just raise these so the Secretary can be thinking about them for the next time"?

AND WHEN he came next time Mr. Rusk was so abused by committee members for trying to answer these questions first that Senator McGee, distressed by this unfairness, said:

"I think it is time we quit throwing beanballs every other pitch.

"I have the feeling we start in these hearings with the assumption that the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense are guilty and they had better well be able to prove themselves innocent or they are in trouble.

"I think we ought to go at it constructively and not in this tear-them-apart approach."

Senator McGee is right and Congress would do its work better if members of its committees heeded his plea.

Why Is Good News So Often Buried?

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

I have often commented on the fine job our communications media have done in reporting the struggle for civil rights and in probing behind the scenes to develop important stories in this field. Because I have so often praised their coverage, I feel I should also speak out when they seem to be falling short of their high standards of reporting.

TOO OFTEN our newspapers and television stations tend to overplay the harshly dramatic stories of conflict and underplay the quietly dramatic stories of accomplishment. Outbursts of violence or stories of strife bring wide television coverage and are splashed across the front pages but the many inspiring stories of change and progress are too often relegated to the inside pages where they are buried by columns of advertising.

A recent news item is a good example of this. Last fall, Episcopal Bishop W. B. Donegan announced that $2 million in pledged donations to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City, had been withdrawn by persons who disapproved of his strong stand on civil rights. The story was featured widely and many took this to mean that if a church or an organization similarly dependent on donations took a strong position in favor of civil rights, it would court financial disaster.

ALTHOUGH this story was given front page treatment, its happy ending was not. A few weeks ago I came across a small item, buried in the inside pages of an afternoon newspaper. This reported a speech by Bishop Donegan in which he announced that the money lost by the withdrawal of pledges has been more than made up by new pledges from people who never contributed before. In addition, Bishop Donegan said that the cathedral had no intention of deserting the civil rights struggle and that it "has been written into more wills than it ever has before."

The new money has come from people of all faiths. He said that "hundreds upon hundreds of small contributions poured in from all over the country from Roman Catholics, Jews, and even individuals with no church affiliations."

To the best of my knowledge, the newspapers which splashed the earlier story of the pledge withdrawals across their front pages, and the television stations which reported those events last fall, did not mention this new development.

WHY? To me it is a dramatic and inspiring story. Here are hundreds of people countering the actions of a short-sighted few, registering their approval of a church's highly moral act. They made a gesture which transcended their differences of faith. Yet it got next to no coverage, despite the fact that the earlier story which stressed conflict and dissent got such a big play.

This is not just an isolated incident. Papers are full of stories of Negroes who are vilified when they move into an all-white suburb, yet there are never any stories about those who make the move and are accepted into their new neighborhood. Every day Negroes move into such situations and are greeted by their new neighbors, and quickly become outstanding members of the community. These stories are never told, but let one rock come flying through one window, and the television cameras are right there. I agree that these things are news, but so are the success stories.

The Urban League recently announced a new three-year program, "Operation Equality," designed to help bring about integration in housing. This important story was buried in the newspapers the next day.

WEEKEND LIFESAVER

Think, Try Out This Test Before Going On Holiday

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Want to stay alive?

Several hundred Americans will die in highway accidents during this Memorial Day weekend. Thousands will be injured, many permanently crippled.

The National Safety Council estimates that the death toll alone will be between 460 and 540. And the vast majority of serious crashes involving two or more cars will occur in one of six common road situations.

The Associated Press, in cooperation with the council has devised a simple test which helps spell out what action you should take when these collision-prone situations develop.

Here's how it works:

First, look at the pictures showing the six most common situations in which accidents occur.

Second, read the description of the situation.

Finally, choose the best course of action from those listed.

SITUATION NO. 1—You're following another car in a stream of traffic. The driver ahead of you stops suddenly. You jam on your brakes, too late to revent a crash. The chances for this collision taking place could have been lessened by:

A—Always driving 100 feet behind the car in front of you.

B — Blowing your horn and pumping your brakes.

C — Veering sharply into the oncoming lane.

D—Maintaining one car length for each 10 miles of speed, thus providing sufficient room for a safe emergency stop.

SITUATION NO. 2—You're out front with someone following you. You know what you're going to do, but the driver behind you doesn't. You slow down suddenly for a turn and—crunch!

You could have lessened chances for this accident taking place by:

A — Signaling your intentions well before reaching the point of potential collision.

B — By accelerating quickly just before turning.

C—By watching the vehicle behind you in the rear view mirror and veering sharply to the right and over the curb when you see a collision is imminent.

D—By watching the vehicle in your rear view mirror and veering over the center line to the left.

SITUATION NO. 3 — as you drive along, an oncoming car drifts into your lane, or starts a left turn in front of you. Or a car coming toward you crosses the center lane into your lane. These situations all can mean a headon collision, the deadliest crash of all.

Such a crash possibly could have been avoided by:

A—Stopping your vehicle immediately.

B—Yielding your lane to the oncoming vehicle; you switch to his lane.

C—Speeding up and getting past the oncoming vehicle before he comes all the way over into your lane.

D—Pull to the right, flash your lights, blow your horn, wake him up, slow down.

SITUATION NO. 4—You approach an intersection and have the right of way as another car approaches from the side road. The other drive ignores the rule of right of way, or runs a stop sign, or ignores a red light. You're right—dead right!

The chances for this accident occurring could have been lessened by:

A—Stepping on the gas to get across the intersection before the other guy.

B—Assuming the other driver will always obey all traffic regulations and courtesies.

C—Approaching the intersection with our foot off the gas pedal and poised over the brake pedal, checking traffic in both directions, and then yielding, even though you have the legal right of way.

D—Slam on your brakes as hard as you can to let the other driver know you are angry.

SITUATION NO. 5—When another driver tries to pass you there are many collision courses. He may cut back in sharply in front of you. You may change lanes just as the other driver is trying to pass you on that side.

This kind of accident could possibly be avoided by:

A—Hitting the brakes as hard as you can.

B — Hitting your brakes, and pulling off on the shoulder at the right.

C — Reducing your speed, thus making it easy for other drivers to pass.

D — Blowing your horn, and turning on your lights.

SITUATION NO. 6—you attempt to pass another car on a two-lane road and suddenly find you can't makeit. You risk a sideswipe if you cut back to the right too soon. You risk a headon crash if you don't

B—Speeding up and getting back in the right lane fast.

C—Hitting the brakes and falling in behind the car you are passing.

D — Crowding the white car over.

No. 1, D; No. 2, A; No. 3, D; No. 4, C; No. 5, C; No. 6 C.

The Big Challenge In Micronesia

How U.S. Is Helping Islanders

By MILTON BESSER

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A challenging assignment awaits the U.S. Peace Corps in Micronesia — the far-flung U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Peace Corps Director, Jack Hood Vaughn, plans to send as many as 750 volunteers into the islands where the United States is trying to help a population of slightly under 90,000 cope with the demands of modern society.

The 2,100 islands cover three million square miles in the western Pacific, about the size of the United States. But the land area is only 700 square miles. Only 96 islands have people on them.

The volunteers will work in a tropical, rainy climate on projects dealing with elementary education, community development, public health and works, secondary education, cooperative and credit union development, agricultural improvement, communications and transportation.

All these are fields in which the United States has been active since it took the islands from Japan after World War II and placed them under U.N. trusteeship in 1947.

The Peace Corps workers will find themselves occupied to a great extent with young people. Almost half the islands' population is under 14.

The visitors will have to deal with people who speak nine major languages with regional variations in dialect. Six are Micronesian—Yapese, Ulithi, Trukese, Ponapean, Kusaiean and Marshallese. There are also Chamorre and Palauan, which are classified as Malaysian, and a ninth tongue—Polynesian.

Farming and fishing are the main ways in which the Micronesians keep themselves in food.

The principal cash crop is copra — the dried meat of the coconut. Production of copra occupies the time of the largest number of Micronesians who want to make money, and it is the largest source of cash outside of government employment.

The Peace Corps workers are expected to help the Micronesians develop their fishing industry — a potential source for expanded income. One private corporation has signed an agreement for developing extensive fishing operations in Palau, including a commercial tuna freezing plant.

Some manufacturing is getting started in furniture, starches, and soap making.

The tourist industry is beginning to grow with privately owned cottages built at Palau and some hotels and motels on Saipan.

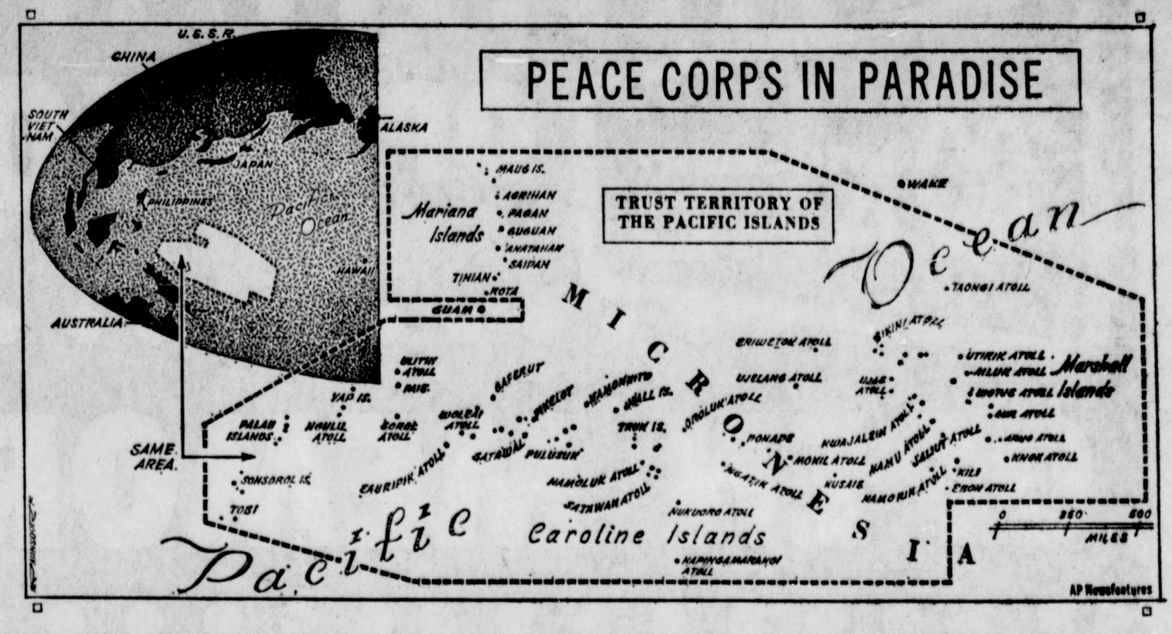
One of the major concerns is health. Tuberculosis is a big problem in the islands. It is being combatted by an organized control program. A recent survey by the World Health Organization reported a shortage of qualified medical officers and nurses, and a need for more hospital facilities.

The emphasis on education is in the elementary and secondary phases. U.S. officials reported total school enrollment on the increase, rising from 20,813 in 1963 to 23,795 in 1964.

The invitation to send Peace Corps volunteer came from the Congress of Micronesia—the legislative body that represents the latest step in advancement to what eventually will be self-rule.

When self-rule will be attained is anyone's guess, but in the opinion of a visiting U.N. mission to the islands in 1964:

"Micronesia, once literally a geographic expression, is now wielding itself into a unified people. Out of six districts, nine languages and 2,000 islands scattered by situation and isolated by history, a national conciousness has begun to evolve.



Behind The News

A Weekly Page Of Background Information

This Week In The World

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crisis followed crisis in the land of two wars.

The military war against the Viet Cong continued far from the centers where Buddhists and antigovernment troops sought to drive out the ruling junta in South Viet Nam.

If there were troops to commit to the battle against the Viet Cong, some of them found themselves taking the field to battle other South Vietnamese.

At the start of the week, marines and paratroops under the command of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky succeeded in putting down a Buddhist-dissident troop rebellion in the port city of Da Nang.

But some 50 miles to the north of Da Nang, and practically within shouting distance of the demarcation line between North and South Viet Nam, some of the worst antigovernment and anti-American demonstrations occurred.

Buddhist students at Hue roared into the streets, aimed at the American cultural center and library, sacked and burned the place. In Saigon, tear gas, riot sticks and gunfire stopped a riot of some 2,000 to 3,000 civilians.

Americans and foreign civilians were told to get out for their own safety and were evacuated. A South Vietnamese infantry regiment was headed to Hue to safeguard the American installations and billets there, but no one could be sure whether the regiment would fight the dissidents, or join them.

Premier Ky, at week's end, was in a secret meeting with his political archrival, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi.

The threat of many more North Vietnamese troops entering the conflict was voiced by a top Army field commander returning to the United States Friday from Viet Nam. Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen said there was evidence that up to six regiments of North Vietnamese troops, perhaps 10,000 or more, have massed in Cambodia. The general said the force is in a position to strike South Viet Nam's midsection.

Around The World, Around The Clock:

PORTLAND—The Oregon primary election was billed as a possible test of President Johnson's Viet Nam policy. Seeking the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator were Rep. Robert B. Duncan, a strong supporter of the administration, and Howard Morgan, a critic. Pre-election talk was that a Morgan victory would be a rebuff to the President, but hedgers pointed out that there were other things at issue. The outcome: Duncan, by nearly 2 to 1.

But least anyone conclude this was equal to an endorsement for LBJ, in the Republican primary Gov. Mark O. Hatfield ran far ahead of three GOP opponents. And Hatfield, like Morgan and Oregon's Democratic Sen. Wayne Morse, is critical of the administration's Viet Nam policy.

THE SACRAMENTO SCENE

Legislature Almost Sure To Run Past June 7 Primary Election

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Hopes that the California Legislature would conclude its 1966 session before the June 7 primary election generally evaporated last week.

The experts and forecasters have been confounded time and time again this year as it appears the lawmakers will remain in session until only a couple of days before the primary. The likelihood is that they will return to Sacramento a day or two after the voting and resume their deliberations.

There are a number of matters which have blocked adjournment of the Legislature but the one getting the most attention at present is the matter of constitutional revision. There's not much disagreement on the proposal to upgrade the Legislature's status by putting it on annual sessions and increasing the salary.

However, the controversy comes over provisions on accompanying legislation setting up a code of ethics for lawmakers. The code admittedly is harsh and restrictive, especially for lawyer members of the Legislature. It would restrict their law practice before any state agencies.

The constitutional revision legislation is being considered by the Senate Committee on Governmental Efficiency, which took it under submission after a hearing on Wednesday.

There's no assurance, of course, that the Legislature can wind up its 16-week-old session as soon as constitutional revision is disposed of, one way or the other. There still is the vital matter of a $4.6 billion budget to operate the state government for 1966-67.

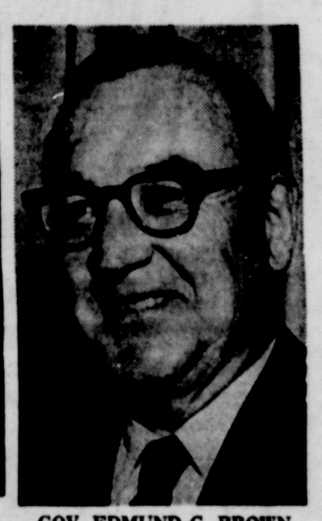
Assemblyman Robert T. Monagan, R-Tracy, Republican floorleader, said the 31 Republican members seem to be committed to making a sizable reduction in the budget —close to the $50 million mark. Monagan said he doubts that very many GOP members will approve any budget without such reductions.

Earlier it has been considered the two sides were close to agreement and that the budget cut might be on the order of $18 to $20 million.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown has reported that 70 per cent of his proposals for the special session have been acted upon favorably.

Brown called attention to a bill signed into law which provides $10 million for additional teachers to reduce class size to an average of 25 pupils in the most overcrowded urban schools and earmarks $35 million in construction bonds for new portable or permanent classrooms to house the additional classes.

ROBERT T. MONAGAN
Wants big budget cuts



GOV. EDMUND G. BROWN
'70 per cent successful'

He said steps have been taken to preserve the beauty of Lake Tahoe, to pave the way for a start on a southern California rapid transit system and bills strengthening smog controls have passed both houses. But the subjects left — constitutional revision, budget, drunk driving and assessment reforms—were making little or no progress.

California agriculture could be facing the greatest farm labor shortage this season since 1952. Throughout the nation, employment is at or above the "full employment" figure, thus reducing the reservoir of unemployed from which temporary farm hands could be drawn.

Efforts by growers' organizations to recruit out-of-state workers have been less than successful.

As could be expected, the problem is receiving considerable attention as the primary election campaign moves into its stretch drive, Republicans generally are blaming Brown for the labor shortage in view of his statements that the state could get by this year without any imported foreign workers.

Brown has charged his opponents with trying to to turn workers against growers. Some elements of organized labor expressed opposition to the current use of some prison labor in the asparagus harvest in San Joaquin County.

The trend toward fewer traffic fatalities in California was broken in April as deaths on the highways jumped 25 per cent over a year ago. During April, 455 persons died in highway accidents, as compared to 364 in April of 1965.

This brought the total for the first four months of 1966 to 1,423, up slightly from the 1,399 total for the first four months a year ago. Injuries also were up for the month, with 7,634 persons injured in 4,637 accidents. A year ago, the totals were 6,894 persons injured in 4,300 accidents.

A career director, DeWitt Nelson, has announced he will retire from state service on Aug. 31 to accept a lecture position with a university. Nelson has been director of the Department of Conservation since it was created in 1961 and, before that, was director of natural resources.

Prior to being named director in 1953, Nelson had been state forester. He will be succeeded by Dr. Ian Campbell, who has been chief of the division of mines and geology. There was speculation Campbell's appointment was only an interim one and that a new director would be named after the election this fall.

A changing picture of illegal drug and narcotic use in California is shown in arrest statistics for 1965. Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch said there was an over-all increase of 11.4 per cent in illegal drug arrests but offenses involving heroin and hard narcotics dropped 22 per cent.

Adult arrests for marijuana offenses were up 33 per cent and dangerous drug violations increased 40.4 per cent. Arrests of juveniles, totaling 2,677, showed a 33.5 per cent increase, with 95 per cent of them involving marijuana and dangerous drugs.

An anti-obscenity initiative measure appeared certain of qualifying for a place on the November election ballot. Walter C. Stutler, assistant secretary of state said sponsors of the initiative, CLEAN, Inc., had gathered all but 23,247 of the necessary 468,259 signatures of registered voters to qualify it.

And the sponsors have until June 20 to gather the rest of the signatures.

Decoration Day In Early Marin

May 30 Was A Quiet And Solemn Occasion

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles on early days in Marin County, written especially for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by pioneer San Rafael resident W. T. Ortman.)

By W. T. ORTMAN

Decoration Day or Memorial Day in the San Rafael just after the turn of the century was a quiet and solemn occasion.

A morning stroll down Fourth Street showed the scene to be very much the same as of a Sunday.

All stores were closed. None of the merchants was about, to do their customary sweeping of the walks or arranging of their display window goods.

Even the restaurants were closed.

IN FACT THERE were very few townspeople about. It was a day of relaxation—of a late start—as well as one of solemnity.

But inside the homes, things were beginning to stir. You could tell that from the aroma of frying bacon and boiling coffee, being wafted in the warm air from the houses.

Miss Mary Farrell, our teacher at the Fourth Street Grammar School, had explained to us the origins of the patriotic holiday:

"AFTER AN ardent appeal to Congress by Gen. John A. Logan, a Civil War veteran and head of the Grand Army of the Republic, it was proclaimed on May 5, 1868, that henceforth, May 30th of each year would be a memorial day. On this day the people of the nation would visit the cemeteries and decorate the graves in honor of the soldiers who had fallen in wartime."

At the time of the proclamation, San Rafael was an unincorporated village of about 300 inhabitants. Six years later, San Rafael could still claim a population of but 372, but its citizens requested incorporation and a charter for civil government that was granted—this despite the fact that San Rafael fell well short of the minimum number of residents set forth by the California Constitution as necessary for incorporation.

WITH THE issuance of the charter, San Rafael was placed under the administration of a board of trustees.

Notwithstanding the small population, San Rafael was a public-spirited community. And the observance of the patriotic holidays in a fitting manner was a matter of pride with the residents.

Prior to the establishment of Mount Olivet Cemetery on land donated by Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas on the old Petaluma Road north of San Rafael, virtually all interments of Roman Catholics were in the old mission cemetery on the lower slopes of San Rafael Hill behind the Catholic church. Other burials took place at cemeteries elsewhere, or on the grounds of ranches and estates.

WHEN THE town decided another cemetery was needed close to the community, Dr. Charles DuBois, a dentist living on Third Street and the son of one of San Rafael's earliest pioneers, designated several acres from his large land holdings on the west side of San Rafael for cemetery purposes.

A private company was formed, and the result was what is known now as Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

This cemetery was a considerable distance out into the countryside, reached only by a narrow, dusty lane that ran among brown hills where poison oak flourished in wild profusion. In addition, like most small boys, I customarily avoided cemeteries.

BUT DECORATION Day was the one exception in the year. For on that day, not only did I join in the patriotic tribute to the dead, but I also conducted a commercial endeavor of my own.

The night before Decoration Day, my two friends and I occupied ourselves in making up small bouquets of flowers of varied colors, to be taken to the cemetery and sold for 10 cents a bunch.

It made us feel like junior business men. And we felt it also served a practical purpose in providing a service that was necessary to the proper observance of the day.

IN THOSE DAYS there were many veterans living in Marin County—members of the Grand Army of the Republic who had fought in the Civil War, others who had battled the Indians in the plains, mountains and prairies, still others who had seen service with the local National Guard unit during the Spanish-American War and at other times.

All these could be seen moving among the graves of the Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, placing flowers and small American Flags at graves, then pausing for a few moments of silent homage to their dead comrades.

The Civil War veterans would be clad in their dark blue, double-breasted coats and their broad-rimmed felt hats with brass GAR emblems showing on the front of their crowns.

INDIAN FIGHTERS from Custer's day still wore leather cavalry boots and visor caps.

Most colorful of all, perhaps, were the former scouts from the "horse soldiers" who wore deerskin jackets with pockets and and long sleeves that were fringed in leather shreds, and with coonskin caps atop their heads. These were some of the men who had served with Custer, with Reno and with Sheridan against the Siouxs in the Black Hills.

Joining these ex-soldiers were the townspeople in their plainer garb, their Sunday best, many of them busy tidying the graves of departed loved ones.

ALMOST ALWAYS Decoration Day seemed to bring with it sunshine and warm temperatures. And in the shade trees near the cemetery caretaker's house, sparrows fussed and yellow-breasted linnets chirped and warbled.

Then through the entrance to the graveyard would march a process of soldiers, moving silently except for the slow, rhythmic beat of muffled drums. These were the men of the National Guard, in their white canvas leggings, blue shirts, khaki trousers and light gray campaign hats. In slow cadence they tramped past the gate with rifles shouldered, to file up the road, halt and ground their arms with a resounding thump.

In the shade of a large sprawling oak on a higher portion of the cemetery, a platform had been erected. Upon it sat distinguished guests including ministers of several denominations. There, in their warm clothing, they sat in the hot sunshine, awaiting the political dignitary who was to be the day's key speaker, and who, almost invariably, arrived late to scattered applause.

THE SPEAKER I remember on this particular day was young Judge Thomas J. Lennon, a magistrate of renown for his eloquence.

His address was long, but it drew the respectful attention of his audience, marred only by the playful pup that escaped from the arms of his young master to frisk and bark until it could be recaptured.

Judge Lennon took his chair among the distinguished guests on the platform, and then a minister of the Gospel walked to the rostrum and stood in silence with Bible in hand. Up the hill where the National Guard unit still stood at rigid attention, an officer barked commands. One squad of soldiers turned abruptly and marched away, halting on the hill slope above a group of Flag-draped graves.

THE REST OF the National Guardsmen divided into platoon formations and took their places along both sides of the graves.

The man of the cloth at the speaker's stand bowed his head. The audience doffed their hats and followed his example.

Softly then, through the quiet air, came the voice of the man of God, intoning a prayer for the dead. Only his voice and the trebble of a solitary linnet could be heard in the cemetery.

". . . may these men not have died in vain," concluded the preacher.

THEN, FROM the lower meadow beyond the cemetery, came the distant fluted shrill of musical notes from a meadow lark, more impressive than any bugle.

With the prayer completed, the assembled people before the platform held their places, awaiting the next act in the ritual. It began with a shouted command from the guard officer on the hill that shattered the silence. His voice was followed by the sharp bark from the rifles of the firing squad. Three times the command was given, and thrice the squad fired over the Flag-decorated graves.

A pause again, and then this time from a distant hill, and this time from a bugle, came the age-old taps, sounded for the dead once more.

NOW THE PEOPLE before the platform began to disperse, most of them making their way toward the cemetery exit. Some paused to visit briefly. Others lingered among the graves, apparently reluctant to leave their loved ones.

We boys joined our elders in the trek back to town.

As flower venders, we had done well, selling all 60 of our bouquets. With the proceeds divided among the three of us, I had $2 in my pocket, a successful business venture.

But somehow, the money seemed less important than the scenes I had just witnessed while a community paused in its day-to-day activities to remember and to honor those who had sacrificed for the living.

DICK LA ROSE of the Marin County agricultural commissioner's office turns his spray hose and chemical herbicide upon a roadside infestation of poison oak. Agricultural Commissioner Richard Straw says such efforts have been surprisingly effective against the pesky weed. However, the county program cannot function on private property. Marin County's War With Poison Oak

It's That Time Of The Year, When Outdoorsmen Had Best Beware

By BRUCE COLEMAN

It is spring and the red is on the oak—poison oak, that is.

For most, the season from March to October is a season to beware.

For one, Eleanor Dixon of Muir Beach, it is merely "the balance of nature." She appreciates the plant despite its drawbacks.

For about 400 Marin men who work for utility companies, it is a season when they consider swallowing some extract to help immunize them from the dread weed—often found, it seems, in the vicinity of utility poles.

CAPT. JOHN SMITH, in 1609, reportedly described the native American scourges—poison oak and ivy—as follows:

"The poisonous weed . . . being touched causeth redness, itchings, and lastly blysters, the which howsoever after a while they passe awaye of themselves without further harme; yet because for the time they are somewhat painfull . . . it hath gotten itselfe an ill name. . . ."

To nature-loving, frequently out-of-doors Marinites, the description is certainly apt.

But how can you tell the beautiful weed? What do you do if it "jumps" onto you and what can you do before it jumps?

POISON OAK inhabits most of Marin County and is especially concentrated in the reaches around Mount Tamalpais which also have Marin's highest population density.

It is found from pastures of Tomales to the Golden Gate Headlands near Sausalito.

The plant, as described by Richard T. Straw, Marin County agricultural commissioner, is deciduous — a shrub or vine — with three leaflets. Its color varies from dull red of new leaves in early spring to bright, glossy green of summer foliage and red and yellow in autumn. It is most prevalent in cool areas where summer fogs and high rainfall occur.

THOUGH MANY persons claim immunity, it is doubtful whether anyone is absolutely immune, writes W. C. Muenscher in "Poisonous Plants of the U. S." Dr. Michael Scholl, Marin County medical director, believes immunization, oral or by injection, has no value, reports Straw.

Straw, in a report to the county board of supervisors last year, says this in regard to knowledge of eradication, immunization and treatment of the plant:

Knowledge: One should know what the plant is. One may obtain a brochure, "Poison Oak and Its Control," from the farm adviser's office in Marin Civic Center.

ERADICATION: A ticklish job, Straw recommends protective clothing including leather or rubber gloves and a large-brimmed hat. Control may be made by digging it out or by applying chemical herbicides.

Immunization: Opinions are diametrically opposed on the idea of whether one can be immunized or not. Straw takes no stand.

Treatment: On contact, wash immediately all affected parts of the body with ordinary kitchen or laundry soap and hot water, repeating the process of washing and rinsing several times to insure removal of plant oils. Clothing should be removed and washed immediately as it can be an indirect source of infection or reinfection.

INFORMATION regarding relief remedies and, in cases of serious inflammation, should be obtained from one's physician.

The county, says Straw, sprays the weed along county rights-of-way and property but is limited because it cannot go on private property.

As an example of the effectiveness of the county spray program, Straw can point to the county roads along the ridge between Mill Valley and Tamalpais Valley, which received considerable attention last year. "We were not only pleased, but surprised, by the amount of control we attained," he says.

In recent weeks West Marin has been receiving some special attention from county spray equipment and personnel.

THESE MARIN cities have poison oak control programs: Sausalito and Mill Valley, rights-of-way and parks; Corte Madera and Larkspur, rights-of-way; Fairfax and San Rafael, parks. San Anselmo, Ross, Tiburon and Belvedere have none. Novato has a service agreement with Marin County.

Peter W. Tibbetts, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. manager in Southern Marin, reports his company offers gratis to employees on a voluntary basis oral medication as a preventive as well as a medicated ointment used for protective purposes and relief. He says his company has about 250 employees who could be involved.

Electric Supt. Leonard O. Robertson of Pacific Gas and Electric Co., San Rafael, reports about 130 Marin employees are exposed to poison oak "sometime or another."

THEY, ALSO, on a voluntary basis, are invited to take an oral extract in the winter months and the company provides calimine lotion for employees who contact poison oak.

"Maybe 15 of those who have problems with poison oak have been helped by taking oral extracts," he said. "Our company is sold on it."

Such extracts, non-toxic pure alcoholic extracts of poison oak and ivy, are prepared by an approved pharmaceutical laboratory for E. D. Bullard Co. in Sausalito. The company markets them through a local distributor and they can be bought at local drug stores.

THE COMPANY reports that the immunization products have met with "marked success" in reducing lost time by public utility company employees. They have reportedly proved effective in eight out of 10 cases with no reports of toxicosis received.

Miss Dixon of Muir Beach believes the plant is a beautiful one and reports that it is protected at Point Lobos State Park.

She cites from research that the Karok Indians of Northwestern California used to cover soap root bulbs with poison oak while baking them.

THE KONCOW Indians of Marysville mixed the leaves into acorn meal when baking bread and Indian tribes along rivers used poison oak twigs to spit salmon steak while being smoked.

Juice from stems of leaves and roots were used to cure warts of local Indians, she reports, and the black juice was used by Pomo Indians for ringworm and to dye baskets.

Honey from the plant's white flowers is excellent for human consumption, according to Mary Elizabeth Parsons in her book, "Wild Flowers of California."

Miss Dixon feels, as she says, "It is really clear we live in an effete age."

Summing up, here are some basic rules: If you get it, stay out of poison oak's path. Never burn it. If you're a gambler, a good gamble is immunization. If you've got it, wash immediately —yourself and your clothing.

If you don't seem to fit into any of these categories, perhaps the best thing to do is to do as Miss Dixon of Muir Beach does — appreciate poison oak—and live with it.

The Beauty Queen And Her New Happiness Project

By DON KEOWN

Thirty-one years ago, Benito Mussolini's Fascist hordes were invading little Ethiopia, and Bruno Richard Hauptmann was standing trial for the kidnap-slaying of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

But what Mrs. Mervyn Chioino of San Rafael remembers best about 1935 is that it was the year she went to Atlantic City, N.J., as the Miss California representative in the Miss America Pageant.

With her, Mrs. Chioino, then Virginia Donham, took a host of beauty titles she had earned earlier including those of Miss Petaluma, Miss Marin County and Miss San Francisco.

And at Atlantic City, she was a finalist for national honors, and finished first in evening gown competition.

MRS. CHIOINO still looks back upon those experiences with pleasure, and she does not agree with those who belittle beauty pageants.

"It was a wonderful opportunity," she says. "I would recommend it to any young girl who has a chance to compete and to go to Atlantic City."

But right now, Mrs. Chioino's interest is not focused upon teenagers and young adults.

"You hear a lot about youth being our forgotten age group," she says. "I don't agree with that. I am in favor of doing everything reasonable we can for our children. But the really forgotten ones—the neglected ones —are to be found among our elderly.

"GRANDCHILDREN are sometimes pampered and protected. Grandparents are frequently ignored and even ridiculed."

Mrs. Chioino says that as a result of her work at San Francisco's Laguna Honda Home for the elderly, with the American Cancer Society, and in various hospitals before and after coming to Marin, she became impressed with the necessity for a greater consciousness on the part of society of the needs of the aged.

Hence, The Bluebird of Happiness, a new business service that she is in the process of launching.

Its purpose she lists as: "Dedication to the fulfilling of the special needs of the elderly and disabled through companionship, auto trips and shopping, lunches and dinners, birthday parties, trips to the doctor or dentist, beauty shop and barber shop visits, etc."

BOILED DOWN, she adds, it amounts to: "We will try to brighten their days."

Such a service, she says, "has been sort of a dream of mine."

And she adds: "I know there are many fine volunteers and professionals now working with senior citizens. But these agencies, organizations and individuals aren't enough, and too many are still not reached — particularly those confined to their residences. I feel part of the answer may be an organized business such as mine, operating at the lowest possible fee."

At the same time, Mrs. Chioino has plans for a non-profit corporation affiliate some time in the future that would make the Bluebird services available to those unable to pay the charges.

She has been busy lining up as her agents women whom she feels to be especially qualified by background and temperament for work with the elderly and ailing.

She sees them as writing letters for the disabled, reading to the elderly with failing eyesight, playing Chinese checkers with them, presiding over a bridge table, and "perhaps most important of all, just chatting and visiting with them."

HER CONTACTS with the aging have convinced her, she says, that their greatest problem is loneliness.

"What they seem to want is someone who will listen to them —really listen," she says.

Some Marin rest homes have already shown an interest in her just beginning to take shape program, she says.

"I feel that those are among the places where we can be of greatest service," she comments.

Several doctors have also encouraged her, as have certain public agencies and various organizations.

MRS. CHIOINO reports that she has made arrangements with Yellow Cab Co. of San Rafael for transportation at a special rate. Restaurants, too, have agreed to assist in the entertainment of her clients at nominal prices.

She envisions as one area in which Bluebird of Happiness can be of great service those cases where the children cannot spend special holidays and occasions with their parents because of the distances that separate them.

"They can call upon us to see that their parents are not overlooked," she says. "Perhaps we could be asked to take them out for a special dinner, or to arrange a party of their friends. Or to shop for some gift that would be appreciated especially."

THE WOMEN who will assist her, Mrs. Chioino says, will be bonded employees.

"The typical Bluebird of Happiness worker will be about 40 years old, a mother who has reared her children, doesn't seek a steady, full-time job, but does want something worthwhile to do on a part-time basis."

Mrs. Chioino says she is being very selective in choosing her employees, insisting on the highest character.

"Since we first made known our plans, the telephone hasn't stopped ringing with calls from women interested in working with us," she says. "Everyone we have accepted has been enthusiastic about the program."

MANY OF these women will have special skills and interests which will enrich their work with the elderly, she says.

Mrs. Chioino, herself, has worked with oil paints and with ceramic tile, and has used those hobbies to good effect in past contacts with the aging and disabled. She is also a contract bridge enthusiast.

"Group hobby sessions in rest homes now largely without such programs would be especially beneficial," she feels.

Mrs. Chioino is married to a San Francisco police sergeant, Mervyn Chioino, and they make their home at 50 Sonoma Street, San Rafael, from which Bluebird of Happiness operations are presently conducted.

San Francisco-born, she attended schools in Petaluma. And her first beauty title was that of Miss Petaluma.

THE MISS California crown was won at Santa Cruz in 1935, earning her the trip to Atlantic City.

"It was exciting and thoroughly enjoyable," she recalls.

Virginia has been doing modeling and promotion work since the age of 14, promoting the products of her home county.

It was at a contest at McNear's Beach that she won a Miss Marin County competition that earned her a trip to Hollywood.

IN THE MISS America event, Virginia Donham not only won the evening gown phase of the competition, but was among the seven finalists in talent (she sang "Chloe") and also a finalist in the bathing suit competition.

"They weren't awarding those big scholarships in those days," she says. But she did bring

IN QUEST OF ideas for how her new The Bluebird of Happiness service can best fulfill the needs of the elderly, Virginia Chioino chats with four residents of the Marin Manor Rest Home in San Rafael. They are, left to right, Harry Sawyer, Rosalie Wold, Charles Freeland and Peter Bambino. (Independent-Journal photos)

IN HER HOME, Virginia Chioino, with the help of scrapbooks and trophies, recalls the days when she was Miss California and represented her state in the Miss America pageant at Atlantic City.

"CLOTHES MAKE MAN—MONEY"

Newsweek says: "Clothes Make the Man — More Money." Maintaining a well-dressed appearance is not just an expense, it's an investment. Like any other investment, it takes judgement, time, and money. All too frequently, men make a considerable investment in their wardrobes, and then forget to consider the cost of upkeep and care, says the National Institute of Drycleaning. The best-looking suit looses its value if:

The shoulders are covered with dandruff.

The collar is greasy from perspiration.

Spots occur on necktie or suit jacket.

Bagginess occurs at the knee or cuffline.

Keep your suits, slacks, jackets spotlessly cleaned and pressed correctly. There are professional drycleaners in every neighborhood to keep clothes in proper shape so they can "make the man — more money."

home a lace evening gown, some other wardrobe pieces, a $100 bill and a trophy.

After watching the competition of recent years on television, she says Atlantic City's Convention Hall has not changed too much in the past three decades.

"But," she smiles, "the bathing suits have changed considerably. We were covered much more thoroughly."

AFTER THE competition at Atlantic City, she received offers of modeling and publicity work in the East. But she was homesick for the West Coast and returned home. United Artists theater executive Herman Cohen wanted to send her to Pasadena Playhouse for studies. But she had fallen in love and chose marriage instead.

She and her husband resided in San Francisco until moving to Marin three years ago. They have two children, a grown son Craig who is married and residing in Mill Valley, and a daughter Jill who attends San Rafael High School.

Beauty pageants, she contends, offer fine experiences in social contacts and travel for young women — "and are all the more worthwhile, now that the prizes are so much more lucrative."

"I WOULD advise any mother whose daughter is interested in entering the competition not to stand in her way," she adds, "always providing, of course, that the contest is one of the recognized, well-organized ones."

But beauty competitions are a thing of the past for Mrs. Chioino, attractive though she remains.

Her interest now is in Bluebird of Happiness.

"There is beauty in the aged as well as in the young," she feels. "That beauty comes from experience in life and in years of service and accomplishment. It is up to us to see that beauty and to appreciate it.

"IF WE DON'T, we are only robbing ourselves of one of society's greatest assets by wasting this fund of wisdom and goodness."

Within the conditions set by a society that cares, Mrs. Chioino feels, the years will mellow rather than shrivel the human spirit. And the providing of those conditions where they might otherwise be lacking is the objective she has set for her Bluebird of Happiness.

BATHING SUITS have changed in 30 years, but girls were as shapely then as they are today. This is Virginia Donham Chioino back in the mid-1930s when she was one of California's reigning beauty queens.

IN THIS LACE GOWN, Virginia Donham, now Mrs. Mervyn Chioino, won this first place trophy in the evening gown competition in the 1935 Miss America pageant at Atlantic City.

They Commute By Ferryboat

By MARIA WOODWARD

Of all the scenic attractions that make up Marin County's heritage, none is more prized than the dramatic view of the San Francisco skyline stretching across a windswept bay.

It is a sight that has enchanted Marin dwellers for nearly a century and to this day the magnificent city view is the reward that justifies the price of a dinner at a waterfront restaurant, the rent on a hilltop apartment, or a breathless climb to the summit of a Marin hillside.

ACCORDING TO the connoisseur, the finest view of San Francisco can be seen from the upper forward deck of a ferryboat, city-bound, with Marin's green shores in the background and the city rising from the bay.

This unforgetable experience which for years has thrilled resident and visitor alike, is enjoyed daily by Belvedere-Tiburon commuters who go to work each morning and return each evening on a trim red and white ferryboat operated by Harbor Tours Inc.

Making its appointed rounds from a spanking new pier and float at No. 1 Main Street of downtown Tiburon, the waterborne express offers a leisurely passage across six miles of bay, reaching San Francisco in approximately 35 minutes. As its passengers disembark at the Ferry Building, refreshed by their second cup of coffee and braced by an invigorating seabreeze from the windward rail, one fact is clear—here are the most relaxed, unfraught commuters this side of the Redwood Highway.

THIS UNIQUE club of seafaring suburbanites saw its beginning back in 1962 two years before the incorporation of Tiburon as a city.

Charmed by the salty flavor their town had acquired after its restoration by developer Fred Zelinski, a handful of community leaders leaned back to survey the scene. The town, as the tourist brochures pointed out, was indeed a jewel-like replica of early days. The village had style, its waterfront atmosphere had been revived and its Main Street spruced up to look old. The tourists loved it.

But was it real? Something seemed to be missing. Something was needed to bring the residents into closer relation with the town, something which would provide a more valid link with the past. The answer—ferryboats.

ONCE THE IDEA got started, it gained momentum and ploughed head-on like those thrashing sidewheel steamers of old. A Ferryboat Commuter Club was formed headed by public relations man William Howell and backed by community leaders such as Palmer Field, Russell Kiel, John O'Brien Cullen and Joe Keller. Bulletins were dispatched to recruit members. The publicity at once dispelled all possible fears regarding equipment:

"These vessels have experience in bay passenger service, are mechanically and physically excellent, are under continuous Coast Guard and government inspection, are powered by twin diesel engines with twin radio and telephone, and will be manned by trained officers and crew in uniform. . . ."

The sentimental appeal was not overlooked by ad man Howell.

"EQUALLY IMPORTANT is the enlargement of friendly and deeper relations that will spring up among club commuters on these daily sailings. This, along with a double-dose of beauty in daily bay crossings should develop Belvedere-Tiburon as one of the finer examples of American community life. . . ."

The club membership which began at 50, swelled rapidly.

The next step, that of obtaining a common carrier permit over the water route from Tiburon to San Francisco, was easily accomplished. Two hearings were held before the Public Utilities Commission with 12 commute club members appearing as witnesses. The mere idea of the ferries returning once again to San Francisco Bay was one that could hardly be opposed by any member of the commission.

THE PERMIT was granted on June 21, 1962.

For the first six months of operation it appeared as if some gloomy predictions might come true. The number of ferry riders showing up for the morning departures at 7:30 a.m. was small, seldom exceeding 50 or 60 in number. Many commuters, despite their pledged support, were reluctant to give up wheels for watercraft.

The Harbor Tour vessels which were then being leased to the commute club on a month-to-month basis were running at less than one-fourth of their total capacity.

Commute club President Howell's press releases had failed to include the fact that the boats were without radar.

IT IS KNOWN that the old-time river pilots used to set their course by establishing bells and horns and sometimes even by the barking of a familiar dog known to inhabit a certain shoreline area. Present-day pilots, unfortunately, lack the adventurous spirit that distinguished their stout-hearted predecessors. As a result, foggy mornings meant sudden cancellations and a hasty sprint to catch a Greyhound bus.

Several disgruntled residents now began to complain about the daily lineup of cars parked end to end on Tiburon's Main Street causing a daily congestion at ferry arrival time.

It was not long after this that Capt. Leo Lomski, the commuter club's pioneer pilot, departed for the greener pastures of Redwood City. It seemed at this point as if the ferryboat dream was over.

BUT THE LOYAL band of commuters, however small their number, were not easily dispersed. Having tasted the joys of commuting via the blue water route, they were not eager to return to the gasoline fumes of the freeways. Rallying their meager forces they appealed to the City of Tiburon, and to the general public at large.

At the critical hour, there came a proposal from Fred Zelinski to build a permanent ferry berth and enlarged facilities at the site of his new Main

The Refreshing Ride To Work

Street restaurant, the Windjammer. More support came from Albert Elledge, president of Harbor Tug and Barge Co., who had inherited the ferry "orphans" and whose company was now prepared to take over the complete operation and pay for the proposed new pier which would stabilize the uncertain future of the ferry project.

The new city council endorsed the plan—the ferries had triumphed again!

UNDER THE sponsorship of Harbor Tours the ferry service has been reinforced with more substantial backing and supplemented with additional refinements. A snackbar service provides the morning passengers with coffee and rolls. On the homeward trip, cocktails are served to unwind the busy executive. No incident resulting from this genial innovation has yet been reported.

According to one regular ferry traveler, the short passage of 35 minutes reduces the chances of intoxication to a minimum. This frustrated commuter reports: "Sometimes when the tides and currents are working against us, I can manage to squeeze in a second drink. . . ."

IT WAS PERHAPS this need for a longer cocktail hour that inspired the Tiburon Champagne Cruise, an outgrowth of the ferry service which is now in its third year.

The excursion, which leaves Fisherman's Wharf each Thursday evening at 6:45, devotes itself to an evening of pleasure in Tiburon, including dinner and sightseeing. The cruise is now a successful and smoothly run operation which last year handled 9,000 passengers during the summer season.

Tiburon travel agent Bert Talbot is the tour promoter.

NOW AT LAST with the majority of obstacles surmounted and with the ferry commute service firmly established as an important part of community life, residents of Tiburon and those of other Marin communities, are beginning to ponder, hopefully, the return of the ferry as an alternative or supplement to a second deck on the Golden Gate bridge.

The Greyhound bus strike, closing their regular means of transportation to many commuters, has resulted in the introduction of scores of additional Marinites to the pleasures of ferryboat travel.

San Francisco Planning Commissioner Orris Willard recently announced the likelihood of a $75,000 federal grant to study the feasibility of ferry commute service between Marin County and San Francisco. Another strong supporter of the water commute is Marin County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer.

Public opinion runs the gamut from fervent support to hard-headed realism.

Says George H. Harlan, Marin ferryboat historian and author of "Walking Beams and Paddle Wheels":

"THE DAY OF the ferryboat is over and the chance of increasing numbers of ferries is doubtful. In 1921 the ferries carried 51 million passengers over bay water routes. Never again will we see that volume of passengers duplicated. . . ."

Says Albert D. Elledge, president of Harbor Tug and Barge Co. operating Harbor Tours: "I think there's a definite need for something to relieve the traffic congestion that exists today in San Francisco. Ferry travel is definitely a possibility. However, I think it should be subsidized. Any other way it places too much of a burden on private enterprise and the local community."

DESPITE THE varrying opinions pro and con, the ferry is once more in the public eye and getting plenty of attention. It may be that the glamor of the Golden Eighties when gaudy magnificent steamers plied the waters of San Francisco Bay has diminished as times have changed. But the families and the communities of Marin that have grown up around the bay are basically the same.

Author Harlan, in his book about the ferryboats of the past, has aptly described, at least for one community, a feeling that still exists today:

"The ferryboats were the friends of travelers who rode them, as much a part of their daily life as their homes, their businesses, and the throbbing communities in which they resided. Besides those who used the boats daily, there were many of San Francisco's regular visitors who felt that no trip to the city was complete without a ferryboat ride, that no approach to any city was more beautiful, more enchanting, more lasting in memory. . . ."*

 From "Of Walking Beams and Paddle Wheels" by George Harlan, Clement Fisher, reprinted by permission of the author.

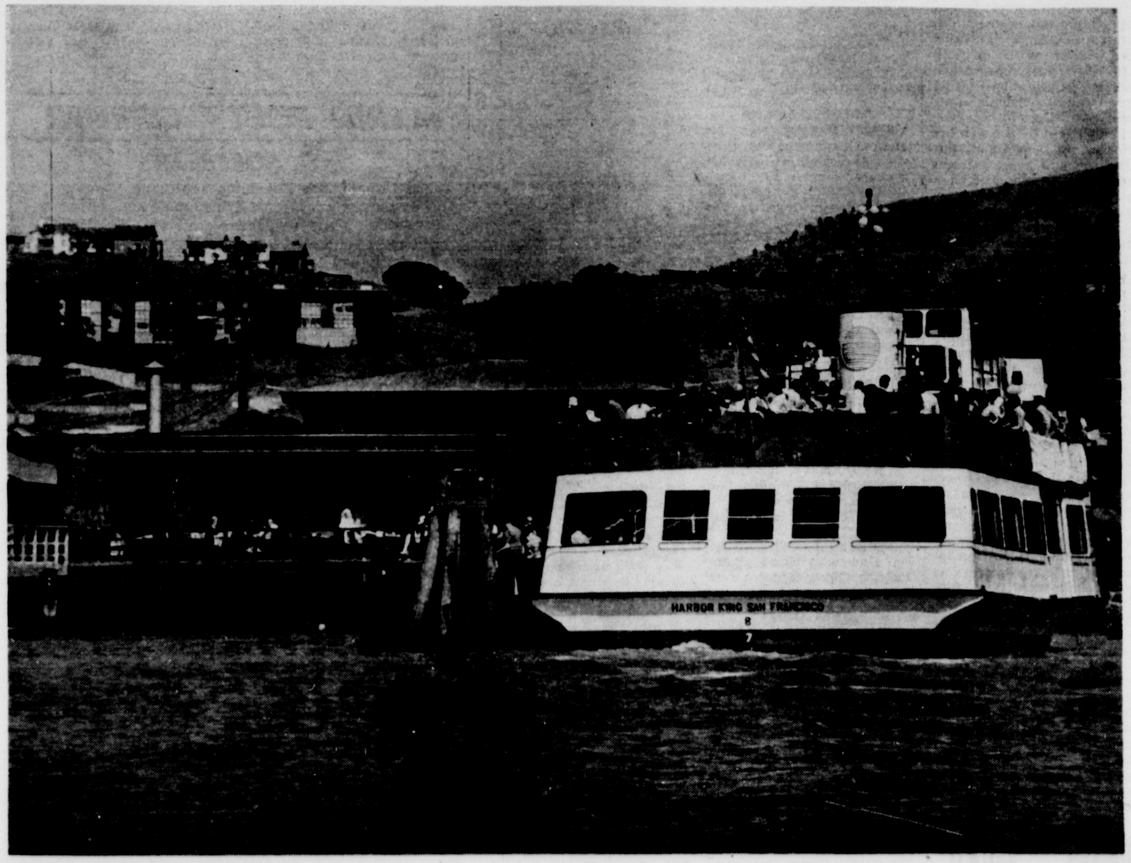
TIBURON RESIDENT Tommy Belton, who works in San Francisco, also has business interests on Tiburon's Main Street, and takes advantage of his commuter trip across the bay to chat with a fellow passenger about his newly-opened Biaggo's Pizza Shop while they enjoy a leisurely cup of coffee at the ferryboat snackbar.

AN EARLY ARRIVAL at the ferryboat pier here enjoys a salty whiff of sea breeze from the deck the Harbor King before departure. Below in the ship's roomy cabin, commuters can enjoy the ocean view as they sip coffee, or pass the time reading newspapers and playing cards.



A CHAMPAGNE CRUISE from San Francisco is another occasion that brings the Harbor King into Tiburon, disembarking passengers each Thursday evening beside the newly opened Windjammer Restaurant. The excursion includes a sightseeing

Audio Engineer

There is much talk these days about solid state components. Solid state means transistorized; that is the equipment uses transistors instead of tubes.

Many units are boasting SILICON transistors What does this mean? What are they referring to? The two commonly used elements in the manufacture of transistors are GERMANIUM and SILICON. Both of these elements are a basic crystalline substance. During the early years of transistor development, germanium was used. In recent years, silicon is being used as well as germanium. It has been found that for high power applications, the heat factor of the transistors can become a problem which causes breakdown.

Silicon transistors can handle considerably more heat and dissipate more heat than can germanium transistors This means that power amplifier stages of components can be made to handle higher power output with greater reliability.

Another important feature of silicon transistors over germanium is the ability of the silicon units to withstand drifting caused by heating up of the unit. A germanium transistor, if not well stabilized by auxiliary circuitry will draw more current as it gets hot, thus drawing still more current. etc. until it goes into thermal run-away and destroys itself. The silicon transistors are less sensitive to heat drift and are therefore more stable in their operation.

DIRECT COUPLED—a term frequently being heard in conjunction with solid state component amplifiers. This means an amplifier design that does not include any transformers. Generally, transformers have to be of a very precise design and must include high grade special steel cores to have distortion free qualities throughout the audio spectrum Direct coupling allows the signal to pass from transistor to transistor without going through transformers; thus, distortion inherent in transformers as well as the cost of quality transformers is eliminated. However the design of wide audio range, distortion free direct coupled circuits is quite complex. Especially those circuits in the power output stages that furnish the final audio power to the loudspeakers. High currents are involved and output transistors as well as loudspeakers can be easily damaged. Good design prevents this

MARIN POETS' CORNER

MY FOREBEARS

Back I would peer, but cannot really see
The ancestral crowd that helped mold me.
My mother's side bred Jews with brains,
But never can I get to know their pains:
The faith they had, which went away,
I think, before grandfather's day.
From Bohemia to a New York City pier:
What fueled his life? What did he fear?
Upon the Liggett line the sun in England rose.
What island scenes did daily tasks disclose?
Northumberland's open downs? The Kentish hops?
Or London—twisted lanes and narrow shops?
Did faith in God sustain the Liggett brood?
And what the Fleischer trials and mood?
Dark Ages further back: What land? What town?
A synagogue? The Crusades? A Sussex down?
Did Charlemagne, with four daughters in his train,
Lift for a moment a forebear's toil-born pain?
Did some Celtic ancestor serve Alfred the King?
Did some Gallic lady sport a gold ring?
In these big States: What scenes? What leads?
The quilting bee, Sabine Cross Roads!
Listening to John Reed speak daring and loud!
Shot down in the street by Olsen's racketeer crowd!
Here I must stop, some pain in my mind.
All helped to mold me, each in their time.
My strengths and my weakness, in part, from this past—
But all with some choice, from the first to the last.

TOMORROW

What is yesterday but today's shadow?
And what is today? It is the present,
"Now" and "here" of time.
It is tomorrow's shadow.
Ah, but how can one define tomorrow?
For tomorrow never comes.

A wonderful and unique idea, and to my knowledge the first to feature either of these predecessors of the modern chromatic harp. The liner notes clearer identity which of the six Medieval instruments is used and in what combination. This would be a fine lp either for the "sound buff" who digs exotic and unusual sounds, or for the true Medievalist.

Planning a Pool?

Anthony builds more pools than the fifteen largest single pool builders combined!*

Why do more people choose Anthony? Why do more people recommend Anthony? They like the service. They like the exclusive accessories Anthony makes; such as better diving boards, heaters, automatic cleaners, and many other things.

They like the proof of security Anthony offers, with an annually audited financial report that tells them about Anthony's $2.9-million net worth and $1-million-plus cash in the bank. They know by this that they have freedom from worries.

They believe Phil Anthony's slogan, "If you haven't received service from Anthony, you haven't asked for it."

Why take a chance? Call the best and the biggest for your pool. The price is right.

*In 1965 in all of Southern California, where more pools are built, building permits show that Anthony built more pools than the next fifteen largest single pool builders combined. (By single pool builders we refer to those who are not a group of franchised builders.) Anthony also built more pools than all franchised builders combined.

Brendan Behan's Last Defiance Of The Conventions Of Society

By DON KEOWN

The posthumous publication of unfinished literary works is not often a successful endeavor.

Brendan Behan's "Confessions of an Irish Rebel," happily, is an exception to that rule.

It is a sequel to the earlier "Borstal Boy" and a worthy one.

The reader is told that Behan recorded this second half of his short life's story on tape during his last hectic visit to the United States. He died before it could be transcribed and edited. Fortunately, on hand to perform those chores was his associate and friend of several years, Rae Jeffs, to whom he referred as his "literary midwife."

She has performed those tasks so skillfully that all the flavor of Behan—his vitality, his wit, his tempestuousness, his temper and his compassion — has not only survived but has been seasoned and sharpened.

CONFESSIONS OF AN IRISH REBEL by Brendan Behan, Bernard Geis Associates, 245 pages, $4.95.

"Confessions of an Irish Rebel" is unquestionably Behan from start to finish, told in his unique blend of lyricism and blasphemy, complete to the sometimes tiresome repetition of favored expletives and to the always tight command of language and the senses.

You begin where "Borstal Boy" left off, with Behan's release from prison after a three-year term for his Irish Republican Army activities. He heads for home, and promptly plunges once again into the thick of IRA intrigue.

There is more jail, visits to Paris, expulsions from London, missions across the border, various escapades, literary and stage triumphs and disasters.

You get Behan's own views of the people he has known, from candid assessments of Camus and Sartre to his Irish drinking cronies and IRA compatriots.

You meet Behan the reveler, the pimp, the pornographer, the drunk, the smuggler, the discontented house painter, the moocher.

You also meet Behan the playwright, the poet, the patriot, the hero, the gentle soul, the defender of the downtrodden, the gay troubador.

You discover that while Behan was capable of intense dislike and disdain for groups—the English, for example—he almost invariably liked and befriended individuals, even Englishmen and jailers.

The reader quits Behan with the realization that there was much more in him than a talented clown, wastrel and rascal. That there was a depth to the man that was reflected not only in what he wrote, but in the way he lived. For Behan's rebellion, misdirected though it was at times, was as much a rejection of the impositions and indignities heaped upon all men as it was of the restraint that society attempted to place upon him personally.

"Confessions of an Irish Rebel" lends new luster to the Behan legend. And it underlines the tragedy that this talented, charming man was lost so early and with so much of his promise yet unfilled.

Yet, despite that unhappy note, it is still a joyously ribald book, for, even in times of adversity, Behan lived in that lusty style. And he talked and wrote the way he lived—bombastically but honestly.

THE LATE Brendan Behan completes in "Confessions of an Irish Rebel" the autobiography he began in "Borstal Boy." It was tape recorded shortly before his death.

THE NEW NOVELS

More Than Laughs

THE TROUBLE WITH HEAVEN by Leland Frederick Cooley, Doubleday, 228 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Because of its light, humorous touch, and the approaching season, there is a danger that this book might be passed off unfairly as "summer reading," as the ads phrase it.

There is more to it than a laugh and a chuckle, particularly for those who like their social comment presented in an entertaining manner, rather than hammered home in a heavy-handed style.

In Cooley's case, the target is the foibles of modern churches that resemble business organizations and have a hard time sticking to moral values when they conflict with a chance to gain substantial cash.

The crisis comes when a church, named the Congregarian Church, inherits the largest gambling casino in Reno, and one of its ministers falls in love with a six-foot, red-haired stripteaser.

One of the more amusing chapters relates how the church transforms the gambling casino into "The Golden Age Retirement Club and Casino," where elderly residents can win a free month's rent on the slot machines.

The compromise reached between the church and the gamblers at first seems to be just part of a wild story plot. But when those who run the temples walk hand-in-hand with the money changers, there's room for thought along with the laughs.

Haunting Novel

THE GATES OF THE FOREST by Elie Wiesel, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 215 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Having come back at 17 from the hell of Auschwitz, Elie Wiesel writes with shattering honesty of the holocast.

His hero, of the same age, gives his name to the mysterious Jew he meets in hiding, and ever after, even in peacetime and another country, he searches to find the identity he has given away. He doubts that the nameless Jew really exists, yet he must search for him. His existentialistic question: How does man survive without faith or hope?

With magical power and suspense, Wiesel mingles the horrors of the "final solution" with traditional Jewish themes. Realism and hallucination are interchangeable, yet on the surface his story is a fast-paced chase.

Such seeming simplicity adds to the haunting quality of this moving quest for faith in a world where reason is clearly dead.

This novel, the fourth by Wiesel, received the 1966 Jewish Heritage Award, and well merits special recognition.

Admirable Hero

THE MAKING, by Sherman Baker, World, 306 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

The most striking point about this outstanding novel is that the hero is a thoroughly admirable man.

He has principles and he stands by them. He has faults and he tries to rise above them. And he has loyalties that he maintains in the face of great obstacles.

This fascinating story is about the publishing world — mainly about how Alex Godowski fights to maintain the high standards of the founders of his firm.

Baker exercises such skill in showing us the politics and social life of the New York publishing scene that the reader is at no time conscious of the mechanics of his craft.

preserve fading aspects of early Americana.

The softcover book of magazine size is neither a scholarly volume nor, as some might expect, a collection of grimly humorous inscriptions. It is simply a record by rubbings of representative pieces from one early form of American art that reflected in many ways the culture and way of life of our forefathers. While most of the illustrations are rubbings (more than 150 in all), some photographs have also been included.

ROPE-SPINNING isn't exactly in vogue as a pastime right now, but, who knows? Perhaps all it needs is a nudge to touch off renewed interest in the old cowboy skill.

Dover Publications is obviously hoping to provide just that impetus with its reprint of "Roping: Trick and Fancy Rope Spinning" by oldtime champion Chester Byers, as a $1 paperback.

First published in 1928 by Putnam's, the book covers the history as well as the techniques of fancy roping, with some insight into the rodeo-show life of Byers' time. The foreword is by the best-known of all the ropers, Will Rogers.

FOR THOSE interested in Early American houses, Dover Publications has reissued in softcover two authoritative books:

"Dutch Houses in the Hudson Valley Before 1776" was written by Helen Wilkinson Reynolds, illustrated by photographer Margaret de M. Brown and introduced by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Going beyond mere architecture, the author also delved into the general history and sociology of a colorful area. It sells for $3.

"Early Connecticut Houses" also relates structures of that region to cultural and social problems. Norman M. Isham and Albert F. Brown were the co-authors. Illustrations include diagrams and drawings as well as plates. And there is a detailed discussion of building materials and methods. This reprint is priced at $2.25.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE HEIR HUNTERS by Bill S. Ballinger, Harper & Row, 204 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Bill Ballinger is one of the better exponents of the crime story based on tough characters and fast, sometimes violent, action. This serves as an excellent example of his work.

A young refugee from law school arrives on the West Coast broke, but looking for ways to remedy that condition. He soon makes the acquaintance of three beautiful women. And he finds himself engaged in a hunt for a missing heiress that could, if successful, remedy his financial condition. He also finds himself in trouble with the local representatives of the Cosa Nostra.

Ballinger's mystery is not a deeply plotted one. But it suffices to serve as the framework for a story whose pace never lags. His characterizations are better than most writing in this genre. And all in all, "The Heir Hunters" makes for the kind of reading that causes you to forget your own cares in your involvement with the problems of Ballinger's rather ingenious young hero.

Some New Reading For The Juniors

GEORGIE, the shy little ghost-hero of four earlier books by Robert Bright, returns in "Georgie and the Magician" for further adventures with his friends, Miss Oliver the owl and Herman the cat. Bright is also the illustrator.

Some new books for the juniors:

"The Silver Cricket" by Joy DeWeese - Wehen of Sausalito (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $3.50) represents a successful effort to adapt the Gothic romance and suspense novel, so popular with adults, to the special interests of girls in their early teens. Against the colorful background of a Florentine villa, rich in history, the writer tells the story of a visiting American girl who finds herself caught up in mystery and danger. Naturally, there is a handsome young man. The rich canvas provided by the ancient city is used to fine advantage in this Junior Literary Guild section as an outstanding book for its older readers.

The hero of "Georgie and the Magician" by Robert Bright (Doubleday, $3.25) is a very friendly ghost who lives in the Whittakers' attic, and who, in this book, joins with two friends, Miss Oliver the owl, and Herman the cat, to help Mr. Whittaker put on a magic show for children. There are problems, but Georgie and his group are equal to the challenge. It is a delightful little book for tots 3 through 6.

An unusual booklet for juniors is "Camping for Boys and Girls" (Follett, $1). This illustrated paperback was authored by Tom McNally, Chicago Tribune outdoors editor, and is offered as a guide to help the youngsters "get the most out of camping." It covers subjects ranging from selecting and caring for camp gear and clothes to setting up campsites. There is a list of federal and state campsite information agencies, and some helpful information on outdoor cookery. It is part of Follett's "All - Star Sports Books" series.

Boys with a yen for mystery and adventure are well acquainted with the Norvin Pallas character, Ted Wilford. In "The SS Shamrock Mystery" (Ives Washburn, $3.50), Pallas features his hero in his 14th "who-dun-it" for juniors. The young collegian, a part-time writer for his hometown newspaper, finds himself in the course of his duties on board a Great Lakes ore carrier where there are some strange occurrences. Good mystery and interesting background.

Automobiles fascinate many youngsters — especially small boys. In "The Look of Cars" (Dutton, $4.95), advertising man Henry B. Lent, long associated with the automotive industry, tells, with the help of photographs, the story of the changes in appearance that autos have undergone through the years. It also offers young readers some insight into the possible career choice of auto stylist. But the principal appeal is to car buffs, particularly the juniors, but not necessarily restricted to them. Dad, too, is likely to find himself browsing through its pages.

Alphabet books retain their appeal and value for the small readers. "ABC: An Alphabet Book" (Platt & Munk, $2.50) is given special distinction by its illustrations—color photographs by Thomas Matthiesen. Thus the child can associate the letter with the illustrative object as he actually has seen and knows it—with no distortion to confuse him. An excellent combination of the familiar and the somewhat less familiar, to introduce the child to new things, has been achieved.

Parlay the supernatural with the mystery and you have a tempting treat for the 10, 11 and 12-year-old boy. Wilson Gage does just that in her "The Ghost of Five Owl Farm" (World, $3.50). Ted sets out to frighten his visiting cousins, and to his own amazement discovers there really are some weird goings-on in the rickety old barn on the Tennessee River. The author includes a wealth of nature information plus data on nighttime photography of wildlife.

English illustrator Ernest Shepard has taken up writing as well, to produce "Ben and Brock" (Doubleday, $2.95). It's a slambang action story of one small boy and one badger whose lively adventures include some troubles with smugglers. It is funny, yet exciting. Boys 9 and 10 will have difficulty putting it down.

Tales about kings and queens and court magicians always fascinate the kindergarten, first and second grade set. Samuel F. Babbitt tells a delightful one in "The Forty-Ninth Magician" (Pantheon, $2.95) with the aid of simple but attractive black and white drawings by wife Natalie Babbitt. It is the story of the problem of a king who has simply too many magicians with which to contend. There's an old-fashioned kind of charm to this one.

Lucid Theories

DIALOGUE WITH ERICH FROMM by Richard I. Evans, Harper & Row, 136 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

"Could a good mother, even though she doesn't produce goods or works of art, be considered productive?" asks Evans.

Erich Fromm replies, "Yes, indeed, she could. But it would depend on how she brings up her children.

"If she reads all the books on child psychology, psychoanalysis, and child psychiatry, and then applies a formula to her children, I would not consider her a productive character. I would consider her essentially a receptive character who just drinks in and applies it.

"A productive mother, in contrast, would be a mother who observes herself; who is not constantly watching what other people say; who has a sense of her own authority, not in the sense of the authoritarian character, but who has convictions; who is observant; and who can often correctly tell if a child is really ill or not, if it is unhappy, anxious, etc."

Somehow, this sounds more like homespun philosophy than the theory of a leading psychoanalyst, whose followers in Marin County are legion. When he speaks in Olney Hall, the audience always overflows into adjoining rooms to hear the address piped in.

These people usually have read most of Fromm's works, especially "Escape From Freedom." However, people who read very little in the field of psychology might be surprised at the following quotations found in these conversations:

"Certainly, I don't think even psychoanalysis is THE answer." Or, "I'm concerned with freedom, but I'm equally concerned with simple privacy."

These edited conversations synthesize Fromm's recent theories. His views of the productive and non-productive personalities and the methods people use to defend themselves against unsatisfactory reality are covered.

We also find here lucid explanations of Fromm's theories on alienation, freewill versus mechanism, existentialism, humanism versus mechanism, and the role of science in psychology.

This is a highly satisfactory,

ERICH FROMM
His views revised

though abbreviated, format for bringing the reader up-to-date with Dr. Fromm's latest revisions in theory. Theories, methods, and approaches to research in this field are constantly changing. If Freud were alive today, he undoubtedly would totally revise his own theories.

For those who want a more thorough investigation, there are convenient footnotes with references.

Policy Proposal

COMMUNIST CHINA'S ECONOMIC GROWTH AND FOREIGN TRADE: Implications for U.S. Policy, by Alexander Eckstein, McGraw-Hill, 366 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

Professor Eckstein, author of this third volume in the series "The United States and China in World Affairs," is professor of economics at the University of Michigan. This volume is more technical in nature than its predecessors, but it is readily intelligible to the lay reader with an interest in the subject.

The questions Professor Eckstein raises are:

1. What effect, if any, did or may economic development have upon the policy of the Chinese Communists?

2. What new threats or opportunities face U.S. and Soviet policy-makers as a result?

As for the first question, he points out that the Chinese Communists have more or less successfully weathered tremendous economic reverses in the early 1960s. Furthermore, despite these reverses, China has become a major Asiatic power, albeit only a second-class world power, in both productive and military terms.

Unfortunately, these successes are not sufficient to bring prosperity to China, but they are adequate to finance "a bold, aggressive and expansionist foreign policy" with serious implications for both the U.S. and the USSR.

In his conclusion, the author does an unusual thing for these times: He analyzes the assumptions of U.S.-China policy and suggests an alternative which allows us to take the unilateral initiative.

On the basis of quite convincing evidence, he states that "the U.S. embargo is of practically no economic significance, for China has been and is currently able to obtain all the goods she needs from other countries at no significant additional cost."

Then he points out that this "symbolic" embargo, which does not hurt China, does delude us into thinking that we are hurting China and also alienates our allies and cuts off our business community from whatever share of the China trade they might capture. Finally, he suggests that when political circumstances are ripe, lifting the embargo might be a logical first step to establishing normal relations between the U.S. and China. The beauty of such a step is "it can be initiated unilaterally without resort to negotiation, and it can be implemented without any economic cost."

This modest suggestion represents a major constructive contribution to a potentially more fruitful China policy, particularly in light of the thoughtful, scholarly research upon which it is based.

Bleak Outlook

CROSSCUTS THROUGH HISTORY by Dagobert D. Runes, Philosophical Library, 118 pages, $2.75. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

Professor Runes has written a bad book with a good purpose.

"Crosscuts" is a history of despotism, told to erase the patina of romance from the heroes of the past. He wants to show "the true face of history . . . of the people and not of their exploiters . . . and to show in the true light the persons of reckless ambition and malevolence who made the world we live in a jungle of mutual destruction for the glory and vanity and ugly avarice of the very few . . ."

Runes takes the negative side of Carlyle's thesis that history is the collective biographies of great men, and substitutes "ambitious" or "malevolent" for "great." He defends this oversimplification with heat, castigating ideas, institutions and individuals in turn, and with a vehemence that repels rather than instructs.

Freedom and democracy are the cures Runes recommends, citing the "purity of Athenian democracy" as an exemplary state. The slaves of ancient Athens might smile wryly at his generalization.

Stylistically, the book is disorganized and fragmentary, justifying the author's claim in his preface that "this book has no beginning and no end."

One can agree with Runes that slavery, genocide and tyranny are abominations on the human scene without feeling that the unrelieved and unconstructive bleakness of this slim volume provides much of an antidote.

Decor Ideas

NEW USES FOR OLD CANNONBALLS by David B. Van Dommelen, Funk & Wagnalls, 152 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

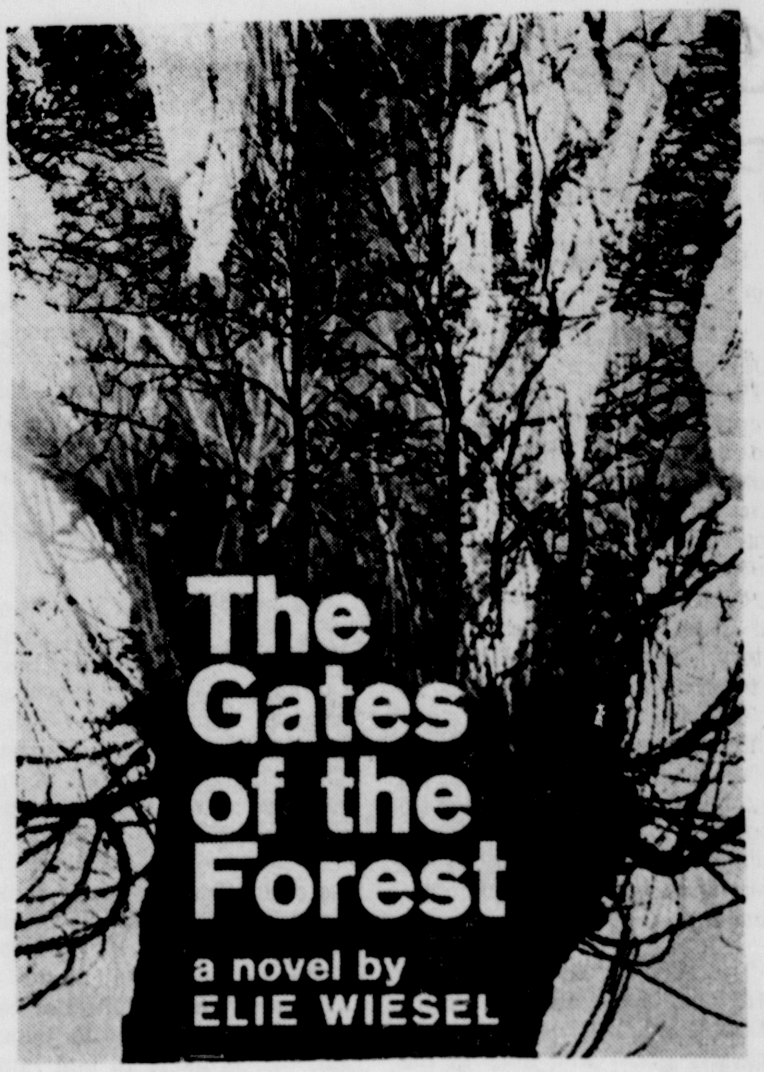
First inclination is to pass this little booklet off as a novelty. Close examination, however, reveals that it is a practical littler prodder of the creative juices.

The second half of the title runs — "and Other Novel Decorative Arrangements." And it is just that — a compendium of ideas by which the homemaker can dress up her rooms and table through the use of simple materials and a bit of imagination.

The specific projects shown, of course, are the product of Van Dommelen's artistry. But there is no reason why the reader cannot embellish those ideas with twists of her own, or use them for take-off points for the creation of entirely new projects.

Van Dommelen, a Pennsylvania State University teacher and author, begins with some general discussion of decorating materials and techniques. His emphasis is upon the use of natural materials, and upon the need for a daring and bold approach in the designs.

In the pages that follow the illustrations range from a combination of tomatoes, green onions and dried wheat stalks with colorful homemade preserves, for a kitchen shelf, to styrofoam and ornaments at Christmas-time. His ideas are always inexpensive, with the charm of simplicity. And his accompanying discussions are illuminating and provocative.



JACKET DESIGN for the Elie Wiesel novel, "The Gates of the Forest" is by Elaine Lustig Cohen. Photograph is by Naomi Savage. Holt, Rinehart and Winston Inc. is the publisher. The book is reviewed on Page M14.

Norvell Gillespie To Aid Of The Western Gardener

1001 WESTERN GARDEN QUESTIONS ANSWERED by Norvell Gillespie, D. Van Nostrand, 239 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

To many westerners, Norvell Gillespie, columnist and radio and television personality, is "Mr. Gardening."

For years he has been helping "green thumbers" along the coast with their growing problems. Now, in this book, he puts down some of the more frequent and more interesting questions that have confronted him — along with his answers.

"What plants can we set out on a dry hillside?" "What is the routine for fertilizing a strawberry bed?" "Is it necessary to divide rhubarb roots?" "Where should pruning cuts be made?" "How and why are plants staked?" "Are cascade chrysanthemums easy to grow?" "Is it a good idea to disbud early dahlias?" These are typical of the queries he takes up.

Ordinarily, the loose question and answer format is not one of my favorites. But Norvell Gillespie seems to have organized it better than most, by chapter headings and with a comprehensive index. Specific topics can be located without any great difficulty.

And, as always, Gillespie remains the epitome of clarity in his always informative and comprehensive answers to the problems of the home gardener. It is an unusually complete manual for its size, with the not inconsiderable advantage of being aimed specifically at a regional audience.

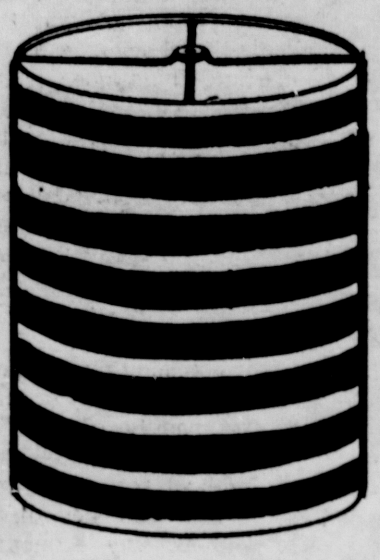
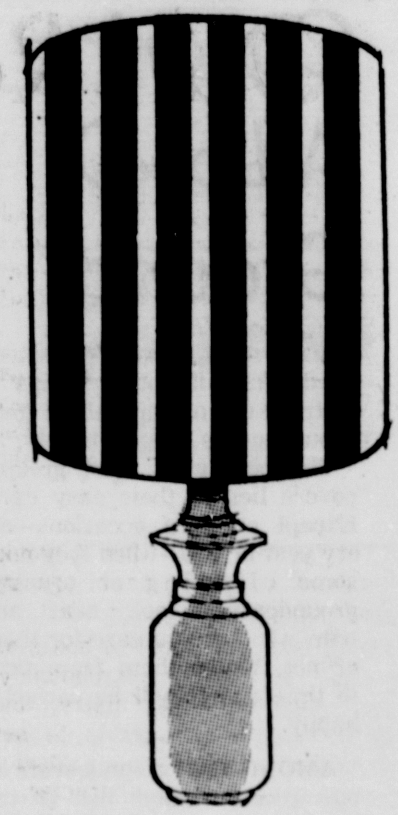
BRIGHT IDEAS

Decorator Shades You Make Yourself

Handyman's Page





You can make your own lampshades, and make them of "decorator" quality.

The three shown here use as their basic material white parchment, which, with plastic, is the favorite fabric of fine manufacturers and craftsmen who make the shades you see in quality shops.

These are cheap to make. And require only a little ingenuity to come up with a finished item that looks like it has cost from $5 to $25.

Stripes are achieved by the application of plastic adhesive tape, one inch wide. Vertical stripes make the lamp look higher. More action and fun can be attained by a swirl. A horizontal stripe lends a lower effect.

The color of your lamp base, naturally, will affect your choice of colored tape, either a matching color or pleasant contrast.

And why stop at stripes? The paper-backing on the wide vinyl-adhesive paper is resplendent with all sorts of effects — stars, a teddy bear for the child's room, circles, or even opaque for an entire shade for soft lighting.

It's a project to challenge your creativity. And you will have a lot of fun.

Screens To Beautify Or Shield A Drive

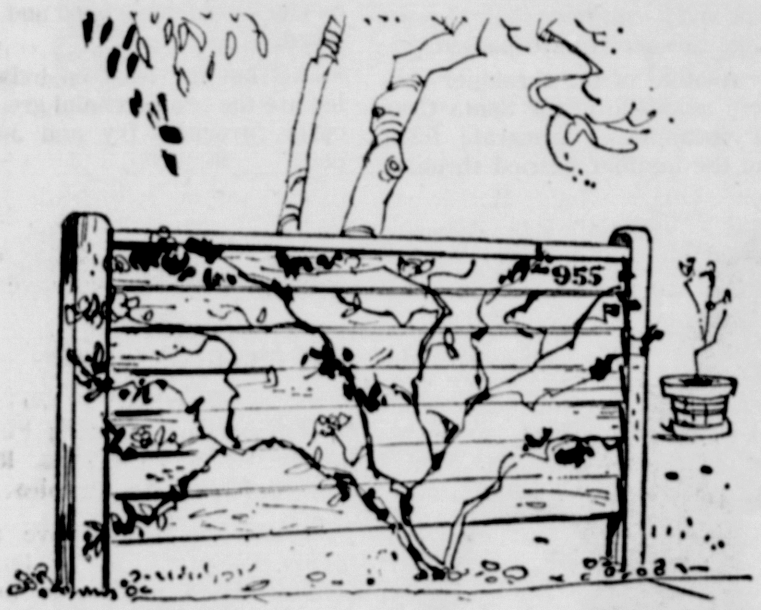
Driveways are a necessary but un-pretty part of a modern home.

To dress up a driveway, outline it on one side with a western wood screen built in a zigzag line, making use of the screen as a backdrop for low plantings on the driveway side.

Keep the screen's pattern simple. One-by-fours set edge out between two-by-four top and bottom stringers and spaced about four inches apart makes a handsome but undemanding pattern.

If the driveway slopes downward from street level, height of the screens should be six feet or more. For a level or upward sloping drive, a height of three to six feet looks well.

Or try the screen shown at lower left if car lights are a problem in your home.



BOTHERED BY car lights that beam into house windows? A driveway screen may solve the problem. This one is low, and built of cedar bevel siding boards to match the house exterior. Use screen as a trellis for show-quality climbing roses.

Need Canned Goods Storage? Why Not Use The Garage?

No space for canned goods in the kitchen? If the garage is close by, why not build canned goods cupboards there?

An unfinished interior garage wall is especially ideal for the job because you can work with the exposed studs for your cabinet supports. Keep the cabinets shallow—no more than the depth of three No. 2 cans.

Be sure to vary shelf spacing to allow for tall bottles and cans of shortening, as well as for standard size fruit and vegetable cans.

If the garage adjoins the house, try to locate the cupboards on the joining inside wall for the sake of insulation. If that's not possible, use one-inch thick ponderosa pine boards for cabinet backs as well as for shelving and doors. You can use ordinary pine boards for the backs and shelves. For doors, use tongue-and-groove stock, held by a Z brace.

Covering A Lot Of Ground

Since most of us are weekend gardeners with other things to distract us, a word about good groundcovers seems timely.

The beauty of most groundcovers lies in their easy care. Except on rare occasions—every year or two—when they need some clipping or pruning, groundcovers look neat and trim whether you care for them or not. Water them from time to time and they'll be perfectly happy.

AMONG THE groundcovers on our recommended list is the Creeping Rosemary. There are various named forms of this evergreen sprawler and your nurseryman will have one or another. In looks and habit they are very much alike, all thriving in neglected areas.

Creeping Rosemary, like its upright cousin of traditional gardens, is a grayish colored shrub with slender needle-like leaves and small blue flowers in later winter and spring. The foliage is aromatic and a pleasure to pinch and inhale.

Creeping Thyme is another herb for general use as a garden cover. Intensely fragrant when crushed underfoot, it can also be used as a culinary aid in the kitchen. The foliage is dense and dark green. The flowers can be blue or white and are profuse in their own small way from May through summer.

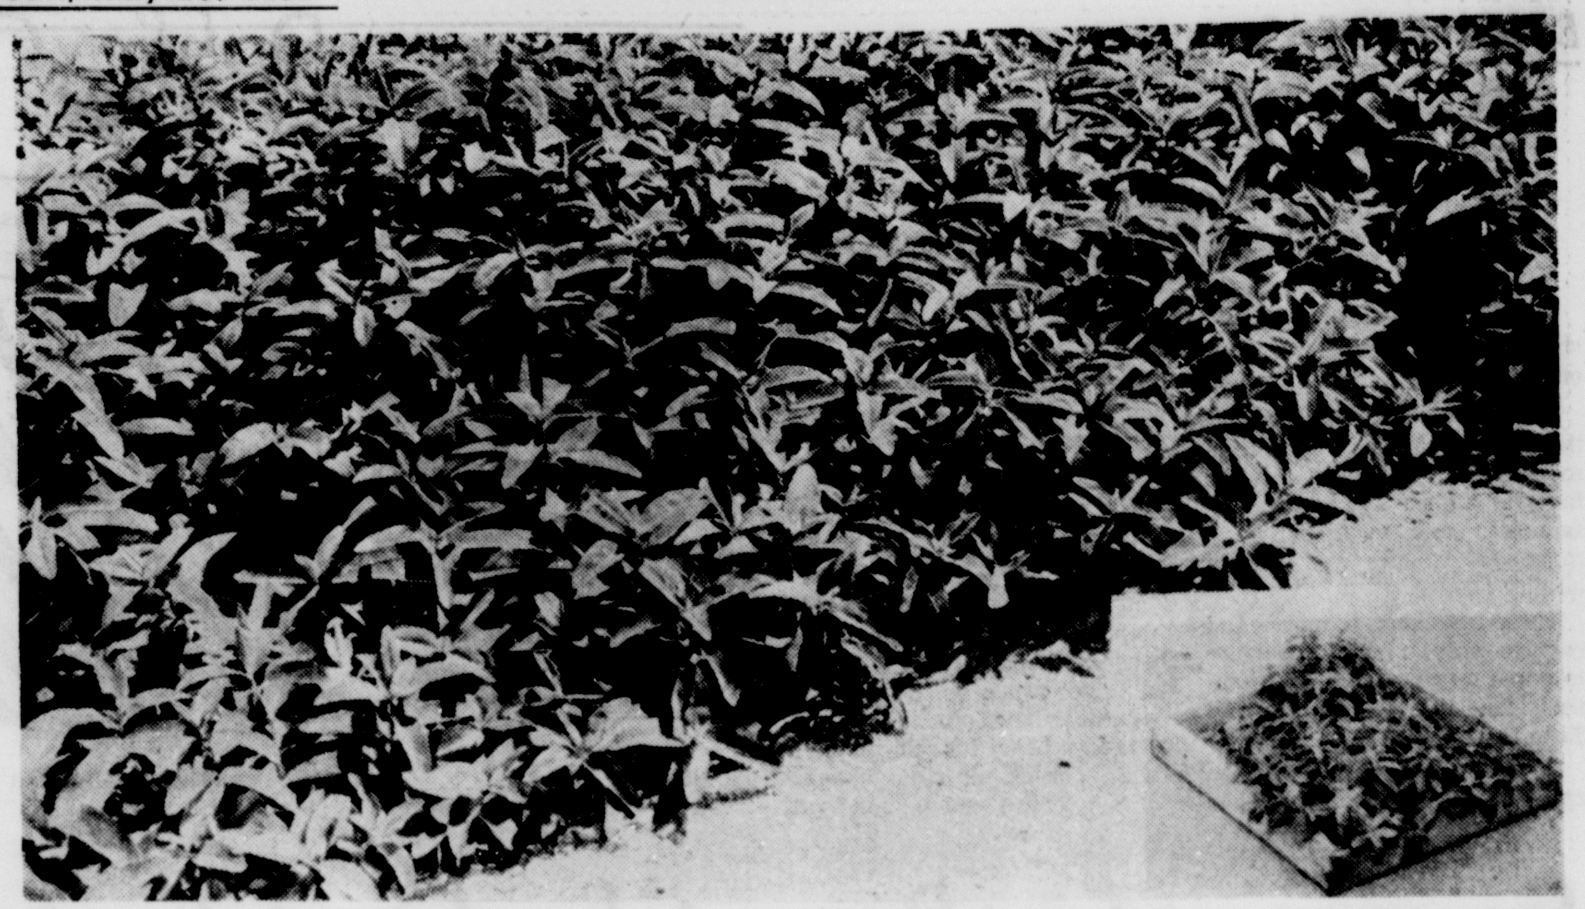
Among groundcovers which are not well enough known, is St. John's Wort. Technically, it's Hypericum and that's how you'll probably find it listed in nurseries. The variety known as Aaron's Beard is the one recommended most often for a cover. A root spreader, Aaron's Beard takes a year to establish itself then really takes off, sending up a dense cover of single stems, each topped for a period in summertime with a beautiful crop of yellow.

FOR LARGE areas, especially dry hillsides, that need something to hide them, the Rockrose family offers several candidates. These are among the most durable of shrubs grown in California, resisting dust along roadsides, heat and drought.

A cover of Rockroses is higher than anything we've yet discussed but it is also easier to care for and its summer show of rose-like flowers is unsurpassed.

Another of the shrubbier covers available is the Santa Cruz Pyracantha, a prostrate form of the familiar berried shrub of autumn. Nurserymen recommend this one especially for hillside plantings, especially below a house, where the berries can be looked down upon and enjoyed.

Last but not least on today's list are the two perennial ground cover favorites—Ivy and Juniper.



AARON'S BEARD is the name of this plant, although, technically, it's called Hypericum. A root spreader, it takes a year to establish itself. Then it performs admirably as a groundcover. The spreading roots send up single leaf stalks, each topped by a yellow, cup-like flower with prominent stamens in the summer. Bees love the flowers. A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Resist the temptation to dig daffodils and other bulbs that bloomed earlier in spring until the tops have died down.

✔ Plant geraniums and pelargoniums now for summer color. Try growing some of them in pots, remembering to water and feed these more frequently than you do plants in the ground.

✔ Roses will give you more and longer bloom if you keep cutting the flowers rather than let them die on the plant and go to seed. Feed and water roses regularly through the summer.

✔ Set the lawn mower cutting blades higher for summer mowing. They should not cut grass shorter than an inch and a half or the risk of sunburning will always be present.

✔ A mulch of peat moss, bark or steer manure around camellias, rhododendrons, fuchsias and many other shrubs will preserve the moisture content of the soil during warm weather.

THEY KEEP coming up with new devices and machines to help the homeowner with his yard-care tasks. This piece of equipment is an aerator, towed by a small garden tractor. The hollow prongs pull out long, cylindrical plugs of earth, leaving holes three-quarters to three inches deep, every five inches—or 242,136 holes to the acre, into which water can run directly to the root system of the grass or groundcover. Gregg Swanson of San Rafael, whose The Lawn Doctors holds the franchise for the Petaluma-manufactured implement, says there is a steady demand for the machine he has working in Marin County. PYRACANTHA IS a versatile shrub that lends tself to all manner of pruning and shaping. Here's an unusual use, suggested by the California Assn. of Nurseryman. The shrub is pruned informally up a post and worked along the eave of the porch overhang where its bright fall berries will have full opportunity to show off. You can plant pyracantha now for autumn color.

Dahlia: One Of The Delights Of Summer

Gardening Pages

One of the joys of summer in California is the Dahlia.

These terrific tuberous-rooted annuals and perennials can be used in many ways for summer color—as small border and bedding plants, as intermediate bedders or as giant show-offs.

DAHLIAS MAY be planted from tubers, which nurserymen offer according to flower form and color, or from seedling flats generally available only in mixed colors. The latter are the small border species. The larger forms are usually planted from tubers.

The seedlings may be planted and treated as any annual, though they produce tubers which can be planted again the following year. The tubers, however, deserve some special care.

Plant them in full sun along the coast or with some part-time shade inland. Don't overdo the the shade.

SET THE tubers about four or five inches deep. In harder soils, dig down another six inches to loosen the soil before planting.

If the taller varieties are planted they will have to be staked and the stake should be set at planting time. Ask your nurseryman which varieties need staking and to show you which end has the growing eye. This should be placed toward the stake.

Water frequently, but don't feed Dahlias until they have grown up 12 inches—then both feed and top them to encourage side branching and bloom.

Indoor Plants Can Add Vitality To The Appearance Of A Home

The most successful rooms today are composed of more than furniture, rugs and drapes.

Take a good look at the interiors you admire and you'll see how many of them achieve their freshness and distinction through attractive indoor plants. The beautiful "real life" greens of philodendrons, ferns, palms, aralias, peperomias and other indoor plants not only blend color schemes and lend an easy grace to the decor, but they lend structure and design to both modern and traditional rooms.

IF YOU'RE looking for a tub plant to give lots of effect in a hurry, try the Queensland umbrella tree. This is a rapid-growing evergreen with horizontal tiers of compound leaves that never lose their shine.

It starts as a glossy, compact youngster, then quickly grows tall to make a ceiling-high tree or shrub. It needs only occasional watering and fertilizing once a month to look its glossy best.

The Queensland umbrella tree prefers diffused light, but will accept a dark interior or full sun. You can keep it in a small planter even after it grows to some size.

For rich greenery to set on a low coffee table, or use as graceful accents elsewhere, consider the bird's nest fern, one of the peperomias or small-leafed philodendron.

THE LARGER leafed philodendrons make lush, tropical appearing tub plants that thrive under difficult conditions.

Many of the palms do beautifully indoors—a low-growing graceful palm is the beautiful neanthe bella.

A jade tree grown indoors can add a note of sculptured, Oriental charm; grape ivy is delightful in wall brackets or trailing from a mantelpiece, and there ared ozens of other easy-grown house plants available at nurseries now.

Ask for a specially prepared planter mix to use when transferring them to your own container.

Just remember that conditions that are comfortable for people are also healthful for most plants. Light in the daytime (but not baking in a sunny window), water when they're thirsty, enough but not too much heat, and an occasional shower bath keeps them growing vigorously.

Don't Overcrowd Plants If You Want The Best Results

'Tis sad but true that most gardeners crowd their plants unmercifully.

Whether they are vegetables or flowers, plants need room if they are to develop as they should and produce their best.

For instance, tomato plants that are trained to stakes will produce more fruits and larger ones if spaced two and a half feet apart. Closer spacing means that each plant shades the next one and competes with it for nourishment, so down goes fruit production.

Tall-growing zinnias are an example of flowers which will bloom much more and have larger individual blossoms if thinned to stand two and a half to three feet apart.
